Dedicated to the memory of Henry Bond, M. D., only son of Henry Bond and Hannah (Stearns) Bond, to whom we are all indebted for the first genealogy of the Stearns family published in 1855, under the title of "Genealogies of the Families and Descendants of the early Settlers of Watertown, Massachusetts."

Introduction.

In the summer of 1892 a few persons in Syracuse, N. Y., and vicinity formed a New York State Association of the Stearns families, with E. C. Stearns, President, Edson J. Stearns, Vice President, and Mrs. Avis Stearns Van Wagen, Secretary and Treasurer. It was the intention of the association to solicit additional memberships until a sufficient number should join them from all parts of North America and ultimately become a National Organization, with the purpose of taking that part of "Bond's Genealogies" pertaining to the Stearns families, as a basis for a new work, and bringing the records of all who would co-operate in the movement down to the present time. After several months of earnest effort throughout the state so little interest was aroused in the subject, that the Association finally abandoned its object. The undersigned, then took upon herself, the arduous task. After the work was well progressed, and accumulating in large proportions the services of a competent genealogist was secured in the person of Mrs. M. E. Abbott. In the early stages of the work we received the manuscript compiled by Irving A. Stearns, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., which was of great assistance in arranging the descendants of "my kinsman, Charles Sternes." We are also indebted for much information to Hazen's Hist. of Billerica, Brown's Hist. of Bedford, Stearns' Hists. of Rindge and Ashburnham, Dedham Records, Family Memorial, by George Chapin Stearns, Barrus' Hist. of Goshen, Mass., Andrews' Family Genealogy, together with town records and family histories without number. Mr. Wm. H. Manning, of Worcester, and Mrs. Amelia D. Stearns, of Boston, Mass., have given much individual assistance, and there are scores of others to whom our thanks are due.

We shall always remember with pleasure and gratitude the interest and encouragement afforded us by our townsman Major Albert Stearns, No. 4261, who has written the article on Heraldry. We are also indebted to our publisher, Mr. F. H. Johnson of Syracuse, N. Y., and J. Manz Engraving Co. of Chicago, Ill., and Bartlett & Co. of New York, for the very able, prompt and courteous manner in which they have executed our orders and to all who have seconded our efforts in the slightest degree, we wish here to express our thanks and appreciation.

Very truly,

(Mrs.) AVIS STEARNS VAN WAGENEN.

July 1st, 1901.

Heraldic Glossary.

CHARGES—Subordinate emblems placed on, or next to the ordinaries.

CHEVRON—Protection. Taken from the rafters of a house.

CREST—Upper part,—above the helmet.

CROSSES—Crosslets; four equal straight arms with small crosses on each.

CROSSES—Flory; four equal straight arms with triple leaves on each, like lower part of fleur de lis.

CROSSES—Patonce; four equal curved arms with triple leaves on each.

CROSSES—Pattee; like a square with sides cut away an eighth part from each corner and four-fifths distance to center.

DOVE—Loving constancy and peace.

FALCON—Eager in the pursuit of a much desired object.

FLOWERS—In general,—Hope, Joy. But each kind has a special significance.

GRIFFIN—A fabulous animal having forefeet and head of an eagle with ears, also body, hind legs and tail of a lion.

HELMET—Surety in defence. Rank of owner determines its shape.

MARTLETT—Like a swallow, but without feet.

OLIVE BRANCH—Peace and Concord.

ORDINARIES, OR HONORABLE ORDINARIES—
The leading and oldest classes of emblems placed next to the shield.

OR—Gold or Yellow, betokens Wisdom, Justice, Riches, elevation of mind.

PPR. PROPER—Natural form and color.

SA. SABLE OR BLACK—Constancy, or more rarely, Grief.

STARLING (OR STERNE)—Industry.

WHITE ROSE—Love and Faith.

WREATH—A circle or ring formed of a light and a dark rope of silk, twisted together.

Armory or Heraldry.

The fact that our fathers brought from England the family Coat of Arms,—that it was borne there three centuries ago, by a Sterne, who was the third citizen in the British Peerage, next to royal blood,—that a titled Stern was Honorary Colonel of a Regiment in England within the past ten years, (1891),—that it was well known in many counties there,—that patriotic and honored members of our family used it here, after the Revolutionary War (see Pitcher, opp P. 79), also, that several different “charges” appear to have been used in this country by the Stearns family, all resting upon the same base, i. e., the Golden Shield and the Three Crosses; all these things make it proper that something should be here said upon the above named subject, even though it be a very brief and rambling recapitulation of interesting published matter, which would fill many volumes as large as the family Bible.

It is quite natural our ancestors should suppose the Science of Armory or Heraldry would be practiced in the new country, for it was ancient, useful and noble. It may have been abused, notably in the times of Charles II. (1649-85), when titles could be bought, but so have all things, even the good offices of the church.

Heraldry in England was a purely military and feudal institution, dating from about 950 A. D. in the tournaments of Germany and imported by the Norman invaders. William the Conqueror (1035-97) appointed some seven hundred of his followers to be Barons, dividing England up, making them Tenants-in-Chief from the Crown; none of these families now remain in the land.

The armorial shield, like the signet ring, was used in the place of a signature, by many who could not write their names. At the time of signing the great Magna Charta (1215), twenty-three English Barons affixed their marks, a cross; it was even sealed by King John without his signature. The Sign of the Cross is often found upon shields and seals; over three hundred and eighty different forms of crosses are recorded. It was usually employed in the execution of early deeds, to render the compact binding, and the custom of persons who are unable to write, still signing with a cross, is a survival of this practice. The Cross is the most honorable charge to be found in Heraldry, and its bearing is the express badge of a Christian; it was borne by the Crusaders and from this fact they received their name.

Coats of Arms usually consist of a shield and helmet, with "ordinaries," and it may have "charges" of things animate or inanimate, real or mythical, each in varied forms, (like the Cross referred to above), illustrated by one or more "Tinctures," (of which there are fifteen, the two precious metals, five colors and eight furs) affording opportunity for much art and brilliancy in make-up of armory, when thousands of pounds were expended upon a single outfit. They were often adorned by "supporters" 'on the sides,—see lion and the unicorn of England; sundry things might be shown, forming a "crest" above the shield, like the Starling of our first Isaac Stearns. Mottoes were shown; flowers, which speak such varied languages were freely used; the whole often encircled with "mantles" or lines of beauty. All the above had a distinct and well understood meaning in the Language of Heraldry, which even the illiterate gentlemen had to learn by heart. The charges upon the shield originally represented the great deeds done upon the field of battle.

Heraldic devices were depicted upon flags, the rank of commander determining the size and shape of each. Some pennons had points like a swallow's tail, and when the owner did some especial act of gallantry, his Sovereign might promote him on the field of battle by tearing off these points.

The sails of the early men of war, are constantly represented with armorial blazonry.

Coats of Arms were embroidered upon altar cloths in Boston, Mass., during the sixteenth century.

Heraldic rebuses were sometimes formed, by adding to the coat of arms, some object whose name sounded like the whole or a part of the family name. In parts of England the "Starling" was called a "Sterne;" this may have caused its use by a branch of our family there.

The arms of the Duke de Medici are used in this country in front of every pawn shop, the three balls.

The Sterne (or Stearns) coat of arms is known to have been borne by families in the following named counties of England: Berks, Buckingham, Cambridge, Hertford, Lancaster, Norfolk, Nottingham, Suffolk, Sussex and York, comprising nearly one-third of that country.

During the reign of Richard III. (1483-85) Heraldry was placed under specific control, by the incorporation of a college, which allowed no arms to be used without authority:

"Arms of Descent" or Paternal Arms, belong to and distinguish some particular family, and it was unlawful for any other family to assume them; the inheritance of such in the third generation, constituted a Gentleman in right of blood; in the fourth, a Gentleman of Ancestry, or a complete nobility, "Begun in the sire, growing in the son and complete in the grandson," qualifying the owner to be received at the Court of his own and other Sovereign Princes.

Coats of Arms could be willed away, given or sold, like chattel property, by undisputed owners. Often combats of Arms were resorted to for the settlement of claims to certain armorial designs. A man might assume and bear arms of a conquered enemy.

Names were often changed, upon the bestowal of a Title, the family name of the Wandsworth Barony being Stern.

Armorial Seals were believed to have been in England as early as 1030. Arms have been assigned to our Saviour; an escutcheon was still extant in 1892, in the Cathedral at Mayence, showing twenty quarterings, said to have been so placed, in order that our Lord might take highest rank as "a gentleman;" a custom prevailing in "Mayence the Golden," that those only, who bore sixteen or more quarterings could aspire to this nobility. The first authentic seal, of which an impression is still in existence, is that of Edward the Conqueror (1042-66). Henry I. hung an armorial shield upon the breast of Geoffrey of Anjou in 1122, upon his marriage to that King's daughter; but enthusiasts claim that it existed at a much earlier date, and would fain show it by Holy Writ in 1490 B. C., referring to Numbers II., 2, which orders "Every man of the Children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house, far off about the tabernacle of the congregation, shall they pitch;" they also refer to Psalms XX., 5; LX., 4, and Isaiah XIII., 2. Sophocles, Herodotus, Virgil and other ancient writers give minute descriptions of the devices represented on the shields of their heroes, but they may not be strictly "Heraldic charges."

This Science was useful in warlike times to distinguish, during the dust and confusion of battle, the different Knights who led and fought, encased in steel; the coat of arms being shown upon the shield, the breast and back; also upon the horse's blanket, both before and behind the saddle. The neglect to wear arms sometimes proved fatal; the last De Clare owed his death on the field of Bannockburn (1314) to this cause, being captured by the Scots; his great value as a prisoner would have saved him for ransom. A typical incident showing the Chivalry of those days, (which was a twin brother of Heraldry), happened upon this field, the day before the battle. King Robert the Bruce, with thirty thousand Scots opposed the advance of a hundred thousand English troops, who sought to raise the siege of Stirling Castle near by, and to conquer Scotland. A river, spanned by a single bridge, divided the two armies; an English Knight, named De Bohun, thinking to win augmentations to his escutcheon, being armed with the heavy spear and splendidly mounted, rode out in full view of the two armies and challenged King Bruce to single combat. Bruce, mounted upon a pony and armed only with a battle axe, crossed the bridge; each advanced to the encounter, when near together the Scot turned to the left, dodging the spear and drove his axe through the helmet and skull of his foe-man. The battle on the following day ended with a victory for the Scottish King; doubtless this incident helped him greatly, for in those days, good or ill omens had great influence over soldiery, and the smallness of his army justified an exposure which, at this day, would be called insanity. Heraldry has often served to determine the age and builder of ancient structures; the identity of portraits, titles to real-estate and especially in preserving records of family relationships.

It was noble, in that it enforced as high a degree of rectitude and honor as the age would permit; it encouraged loyalty to the crown; mercy to prisoners; chivalry to the fair sex; bravery and skill at arms. Only the Noble were entitled to wear arms and up to the fifteenth century, even such must have "won their spurs" or charges upon the field, all others were forbidden by law. In the times of Peter the Hermit (1050-1115) any one who slew an infidel was declared "noble" and could wear arms.

Additions to coats of arms were carried to great extremes, being at times made to represent forty to fifty different things, by quarterings, crests, &c., such as noble descent, intermarriage of noble families, marriage to an heiress, (then her arms must be borne), skill in battle, rank of a son, or "cadency;" a fourth son could take the "martlett," a small bird, shown without feet, to indicate that a younger son had little land to stand upon, hence, must support himself by his wings, i. e., his sword or his brain, and the profession of arms or the church received and provided for him, seemingly a choice between slaughtering soldiers or saving souls.

The nobleman was obliged by public opinion to wear arms; if he committed any act unworthy of knighthood, portions of his escutcheon were "voided," this being done for such acts as revoking his challenge, deserting the banner of, or lying to his Sovereign, cowardice, vainly boasting of martial achievements, effeminacy, drunkenness or licentious conduct, killing a prisoner with his own hands, when not justified by self defense, acting as a traitor to his king and country: for this last crime, the most disgraceful of all, the escutcheon was condemned to be borne reversed; all these things applied, not only to the actual culprit, but to his whole family, until restored by royal favor.

When "villainous saltpeter" came into use, the closed helmets were laid aside, and armorial bearings fell into disuse in time of war, but continued to be emblems of rank and a mark of gentle blood; in later years, the legal restrictions in England have been replaced by custom, gentlemanly usages and genealogies.

This Science has been criticised, in that it encourages vanity, but it has been well said, "He who careth not whence he cometh, careth little whither he goeth." Family pride will do much to restrain the young man from disgraceful deeds; the aegis of a good mother's love will follow him around the world, an ever present shield, and when all the mothers for many generations, have been good, the armor is doubly secure. Children are the mother's diadem; the more useful the child the brighter the jewels shine above her brow, because they prove greater care and skill on the part of the lapidary in the cutting and polishing; hence, the usefulness of genealogies like this, to register these things, and many sparkling brilliants may be found recorded in this volume. However, we will not regret that Heraldry has practically ceased in these United States, except on seals used by the Country, States, Corporations, &c. So long as each of our large family continues useful and honorable, and the "Screaming Eagle," shown upon the arms of our country, may well represent now, that exuberance of spirit, due to the magnitude of the tasks accomplished and the good results likely to follow, as it did to our brave fathers, a century ago.

From the foregoing, it may be seen that family arms may be modified in various ways, for different branches of the family, and these may again be changed by younger branches. Regarding the coat of arms of the Sterne or Stearns family in England and in this country, the oldest that we now have knowledge of, (which we will call No. 1), is that of the Archbishop of York, (1664-83), whose family shield was or, a chev. betw. three crosses flory sa. crest a cock starling ppr. It had ornamental mantling and a ribbon below, without motto. This distinguished man, by right of his clerical position, took rank ahead of all others in the peerage, except the reigning family, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord High Chancellor. We know this to have been an old English family and the arms were at that time doubtless many generations old.

Other branches of the family in England bore three crosses of a different form; some the "patonce," others "crosslets" or "pattee." Records also show that the crests varied, some having a falcon, others a griffin or a dove. Authorities differ even about the arms of the Archbishop, but the above seems to be the most authentic.

The College of Heraldry, in London, have recently sent us a copy in colors of "the Arms borne by Archbishop Sterne," or, a chev. betw. three crosses flory sa., without other augmentations.

Bond's genealogy of our family shows a shield like No. 1, which "belonged to the occupants of the old Stearns Homestead in Watertown," Mass., doubtless brought to this country by Isaac Stearns in 1630, but it also bears the helmet, and cock starling for a crest, with ornamental mantling and ribbon without motto below.

No. 2, Mr. Charles R. Stearns of Creighton, Neb., sends sketch of a shield now in his family, borne by "Richard Sterne, Esq., son and heir of the most reverend father in God, Richard Sterne, Lord Archbishop of York." It is the same as No. 1, except it has for a crest a wreath supporting a dove bearing an olive branch, and on the shield, under lower cross, the motto, Sustinet—to Sustain.

Mr. Robert E. C. Stearns of Los Angeles, Cal., sends copy of one similar to No. 2.

No. 3, The author, Laurence Sterne (1713-68), a great-grandson of the Archbishop, has his coat of arms as a frontispiece to Tristram Shandy and other books; it is or, a chev. betw. three crosses patonce, crest a wreath and starling;—no ribbon nor motto.

No. 4, The imprint of another shield has been sent us, the same as No. 1, except the crest is a falcon resting on a wreath; it was probably made for some one in this country, as it has neither helmet nor mantle, but has on a ribbon the motto, Absque labore nihilit; Nothing without Labor. It was made in London and bears the name below of Joseph Barker Stearns.

No. 5, Mr. M. A. Stearns of Brooklyn, N. Y., has furnished the impress of a beautifully cut oval seal, three-quarters of an inch long, of same design as No. 1; except it has crosses patonce, with family name on the ribbon and chevron bears the motto Exitus actor probat.—The Event approves the Act. He says this seal was made about 1822 for his father.

No. 6, Mr. James P. Stearns, of Springfield, Mass., sends photograph of a shield much like No. 1, except it has for a crest a goat's head resting on a crown.

No. 7, The Family Memorial, a neatly gotten up volume, published at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1891, by Mr. George Chapin Stearns, being genealogy of a part of our family, the descendants of Benjamin Stearns, shows arms like No. 3, adding a ribbon below with motto Labore et Scientia,—Labor and Science.

The Pitcher of Hon. Isaac Stearns (No. 366) of Billerica, Mass., shown opposite page 79, which was probably made in Liverpool, England, and sent to the recipient about 1784, carries for a shield, or, three crosses flory, sa., substituting a garland of white roses and forget-me-nots in place of the helmet, with a mantle of same flowers, and has on ribbon below, "The Arms of Stearns." He omits the chevron and starling, evidently with the view of establishing arms for the family here, which should discourage all warlike instincts.

Stearns, Sternes, Sterns, Starns, etc., etc., is undoubtedly a variation or corruption of the name Sterne, which has been effected in this country. It probably commenced in the pronunciation, and extended to the writing of the name. In the early town and county records the name is written Sterne, in Winthrops Journal it is also written Sterne. "It is also a well known name in the counties of Nottingham, Berks, Norfolk, Hertford, Suffolk and Cambridge, in England, but the name Stearns has not occurred to the writer, in any English work." In the will of Isaac Stearns 1st. of the first generation, Vol 1, the name is spelled Sternes, the surplus terminal "s" being sometimes used in England. The variation Starns and Starnes, is distinctly southern, while very few have retained the original and correct orthography. The varied spellings will be found as they were given by the writer of their records and all families of English descent have been transcribed in their proper places or in the appendix. "In every instance where the lineage of this family has been traced back, it has been to one of the following: Isaac, Charles, or Nathaniel, what relationship existed between the three is not known. Isaac in his will calls Charles "My kinsman;" it is noticeable, however, that all three named their sons, Isaac, Samuel and John, while the sons of Isaac, named their sons Nathaniel.

Mrs. M. A. Whitney of Madrid, N. Y., writes, under date of Feb., 1894, "My father died when I was quite young, but I have often heard my Grandfather Stearns tell the story of the three brothers."

Mr. Melvin H. Stearns of St. Louis, Mo., writes, under date of Oct., 1893, "I have never seen Bond's Genealogies, but the story of the three brothers is quite familiar to me, as told by my uncle, Gould Stearns."

Dr. Phineas Sewall Stearns of Buffalo, N. Y., writes, under date of Nov., 1893, "My father, Samuel, who was born in 1784, assured me that it was a positive fact that the original Isaac, Charles and Nathaniel were brothers," and many others have given similar testimony.

On May 17, 1662, Thomas Clark sold a parcel of land in Boston, Mass., bounded S. E. by land of Daniel Sternes (Suffolk Deeds IV., pg. 268). This is the only record or notice of this Daniel Stearns. The belief is entertained by many of the Stearns descendants that three Sterne brothers came to America together, named respectively, Isaac, Daniel and Shubael; that Daniel died unmarried or without issue; that Shubael and wife died, leaving two sons, Charles and Nathaniel to the care of their uncle, Isaac. Research in England has thus far failed to find the parents, brothers or sisters of Isaac Stearns, the emigrant from England.

To Trace a Lineage.

When only one number is mentioned in connection with a masculine name he is being numerated in the parental family, and has no descendants that are carried to the next generation.

When two numbers are used, the larger refers to him as the head of his own family and always mentions the parental names in this connection; hence to trace a lineage back, refer from the larger number to the lesser one, then trace back a few numbers until you find the parental names, which numbers will in turn refer to the preceding generation.

The Arabella.

From the Memorial History of Boston, Mass., by Justin Winsor, Vol I, page 115, shows a small cut of the Arabella, reproduced from a painting either in Salem or Boston. This cut is a reproduction by William F. Halsall, representing a part of the fleet which brought Winthrop and his company to Salem Harbor. The Arabella, the admiral of the fleet, a ship of 350 tons burden, carrying 28 guns and 52 seamen, with Capt. Nathaniel Melbourne, master and part owner. The Talbot, the vice admiral, is at anchor, while the Jewel, the coplin of the fleet, is the distant vessel on the night.

From the History of Middlesex County by Samuel Adams Drake, Vol. 1, page 25, we quote, "Isaac Johnson, esteemed the richest of the emigrants, inherited an estate of £20,000 from his grandfather, Robert Johnson, of North Luffingham, in 1584; with his wife, Arabella, daughter of Thomas, third Earl of Lincoln, came over in Winthrop's ship, "The Eaøle," which in his wife's honor was re-christened The Arabella. Lady Arabella died at Salem, Mass., a few weeks after her arrival, and her husband, who survived her only a few months, was interred at the upper end of his lot in Boston, in what is now known as the King's Burying Ground.

The Arabella and her consorts experienced a varied and stormy passage and on the eighth of June there came a wild pigeon into the ship. It was not until the seventy-sixth day that they came to anchor, on the twelfth of June, 1630, old style.

Isaac Stearns.

FIRST GENERATION.

Early in the morning of April 8, 1630, Isaac Stearns and family, Sir Richard Staltonstall and family, Rev. George Phillips, Gov. Winthrop and many others embarked at Yarmouth, England, in the good ship Arrabella and arrived in Salem, Mass., on the 12th of June. The ship Jewell arrived on the 13th. The ship Ambrose on the 18th. The Talbot on July 2. The passengers not being satisfied with Salem as possessing the desirable advantages for a permanent settlement soon proceeded from Salem to Charlestown and were among the first settlers of Watertown, near Mount Auburn, Mass. In 1642 we find his homestall bounded on the north by the land of John Warren; west by the highway; south by the land of John Biscoe; east by Pequussett Meadow, a part of which meadow he owned. In the distribution of the estate of his son, Samuel, in 1724, this homestall, "where his grandfather had lived," was assigned to his eldest son, Nathaniel. "Dec. 4, 1638, Isaack stearns and John Page were fined 5 shillings for turning the way about, (i e., changing the highway), and day was given till the next Courte. This was done at a Quarter Courte, holden at Boston, Mass." He was admitted freeman, May 18, 1631, which is the earliest date of any such admission, and he was Selectman several years. In 1647, he and Mr. Biscoe were appointed by the selectmen, "to consider how the bridge over the river shall be built, and to agree with the workmen for doing it, according to their best discretion," says Dr. Francis, in his history, "This is the first mention of a bridge over the Charles River, at Watertown."

Isaac Stearns' pedigree has not been ascertained, nor is it certainly known from what town he came, but it has been found that his wife was from the Parish of Nayland, in Suffolk, and his first three children were born there. Mr. Somerby obtained the following extract from the parish register of Nayland:

"Baptized, Jan. 6, 1626, Mary, dau. of Isaac Sternes.

"Baptized, Oct. 5, 1628, Anna, dau. of Isaac Sternes."

The names and ages of these two daughters seem to correspond with the supposed ages of the eldest two girls of the first Isaac Stearns, of Watertown; for, in the early records, Anna and Hannah were often used, the one for the other.

Mr. Beedham, of North Wales, England, sends the following items:

"1622, marriage of Isaac Sternes and Mary Barker.

1623, baptism of child of same.

1626, baptism of child of same.

1628, baptism of child of same."

It appears, from the appraisal of his estate which follows, that he was in comparative affluence for those early times, considering that he had previously given respectable portions to each of his seven children; for it embraces fourteen lots or parcels of land, amounting to 467 acres, with a due quantity of stock and farming utensils, provisions and household goods.

"A true inventory of the lands, goods and chattels of Isaac Sternes, Sen'r., taken the 28th, of 4th., 1671, who deceased the 16th of 4th, 1671, prized and taken by us, whose names are here underwritten:

WILLIAM BOND, SEN'R.

JOHN BISCOE, SEN'R.

HENRY FREEMAN,

“That this is a true coppie of ye orriginall attested in Oct., 1671, and yn put upon Record, and burned in ye fireing of ye court house, is sworn by Isaac Sternes and Samuel Sternes, 1, 8, 72, in open court, at Cambridge.”

(From Vol. 4, pp. 129-130.)

His will, dated five days before his decease, with his autograph signature, is extant on the files of the Probate Office of Middlesex County, and is as follows:

“I, Isack Stearns, of Watertown, in the County of Middlesex, being sick in body, but through the goodness of God in sound memory, do declare this to be my last Will and Testament, in manner and form as followeth:

“Imp.—ffirst, I return my spirit into the hands of God that gave it, and my body to the earth from whence it was taken.

2dly.—My will is, that Mary, my beloved wife, should enjoy my whole estate, for her maintainance, so long as she shall live a widow; but if my said wife shall marry again, then my will is that she should enjoy only what the law intended and provided for in the law titled dowers.

“3dly.—I give and bequeath to my grandchildren, the children of my sonne John Sternes, fower score pounds, (which) being added to what my son had formerly, will be a double portion with the rest of my children.

“4thly.—I give unto my son Isaac Sternes, seventy pounds, which being added to what he have had already, will be his proportion according to the rest of my children.

“5thly.—I give to my son, Samuel Sternes, seventy pounds, which being added to what I formerly gave him will be his proportion with the rest of my children.

“6thly.—I give to my grandchildren, the children of my daughter Mary, deceased, five and thirty pounds; my grandchild, Isaac Lernot, to have ten pounds of the said 35 pounds—the remainder, which will be twenty-five pounds, to be equally divided to the rest; which said thirty-five pounds being added to what I formerly gave my daughter, Mary Lernot, will be an equal proportion with the rest of my children.

“7thly.—I give to my daughter Sarah Stone, forty pounds, which being added to what she formerly had, will be her proportion.

“8thly.—I give to my daughter Elizabeth Manning twenty pounds, which being added to what I formerly gave her, will be her proportion; further, my will is, that the said twenty pounds given to my daughter Elizabeth aforesaid, be secured for the good and benefit of the children.

“9thly.—I give and bequeath to my daughter Abigail Morss, five acres of meadow, lying and being at Samuel’s farm, to enjoy and possess for her and her heirs forever; and my will is, that my daughter Abigail Morss, may take the said five acres of meadow either next to Samuel’s meadow, or next Capt. Mason’s; and besides the meadow, I give to my said daughter Abigail, forty pounds, all which being added to what she have had formerly, will be her proportion.

“10thly.—My will is, that my kinsman Charles Sternes, shall have ten pounds of my estate. Further, my will is, that my whole estate remain whole and unbroken for comfort and maintainance of my beloved wife, as above said, so long as she doth remain a widow—save only the five acres of meadow given to my daughter Abigail, which she is to enjoy presently.

“ffurther, I nominate and appoint my beloved sons, Isaac Sternes and Samuel Sternes, executors, to this my last Will and Testament, and have hereunto set my hand, this fourteenth day of June, one thousand six hundred and seventy-one, in presence of.

“Before subscribing, my will is, that when those several legacies are paid out according to my Will within mentioned, then my will is, that the remainder of my estate shall be equally divided among my children then living, and so subscribe the day aforesaid by putting to my hand in presence of,

ISACK STERNES.

(This signature was written five days before his decease.)

As she was the youngest dau., and had no brother, her parents aged and his parents dead, it is probable that he then removed to Bolton, not a long walk from his place in Bedford. Josiah Wheeler, father of Dinah (Wheeler) Stearns, d. in 1739, and bequeathed to "Dinah, fourth daughter, wife of Benjamin Stearns, 27 acres in the home-place, including half of the house and barn, and in other localities, 129 acres appraised at £515, 6sh." With what she received at her mother's death, Dinah and her husband had a fine fortune to start with in life. Benjamin was a cordwainer, and he died in Bolton, Mass., Jan. 5, 1755, while Dinah, his wife, d., Dec. 21, 1771, in Bolton, Mass. They had seven children, all born in Bolton.

245—SAMUEL STEARNS, b., July 13, 1741; was an LL. D., and published, from his own calculations, the first nautical almanac ever printed in America. He was evidently a very eccentric man, and although of fine presence and great personal beauty, misfortune was his constant attendant. For supposed loyalty to King George III, he was confined in a filthy prison in Worcester, Mass., for nearly three years, where he suffered for want of the common necessaries of life. He settled in Paxton, Mass., and was a medical practitioner there, a man of fair education, who published, about 1795, a book written by himself and called "The American Oracle," which was a diary of chronological events, poetical effusions, &c. He seemed to be on intimate terms with Sir William Herschel, the great, English astronomer, as he mentions receiving a letter from Sir William, Jan. 26, 1790, which says, "Mrs. Herschel, the Dr.'s sister, had discovered a comet on the seventh inst." Dr. Samuel Stearns md. (1), Mar. 31, 1773, in Bolton, Mass., Sarah Witt, of Paxton, by whom he had one son. While in prison, in 1786, he wrote a poem, advertising himself as a widower, and md. twice in Dummerston, Vt. His second wife, Sarah ———, was born Nov. 23, 1746, and died Oct. 14, 1801. He md. (3), Nov. 10, 1803, Mrs. Elizabeth Albee-Kelly, of Bellingham, Mass., who was the Widow Albee when she md. Alexander Kelly, Sr., in 1797. Dr. Samuel Stearns d., Aug. 8, 1810, in Brattleboro, Vt., and on his monument are these words: "Ingratitude was the reward of his labors.—Peace to his ashes."

246—SAMUEL STEARNS JR., b., Feb. 5, 1776; d., June 11, 1777. The death of this child is noted in the public record as follows, probably dictated by his father: "June 11, 1777, at five minutes past five o'clock in the afternoon, died, of malignant quinsy, after nearly forty-three hours of illness, Samuel, only child of Dr. Samuel and Mrs. Sarah Stearns, of Paxton, Mass. He was aged sixteen months and six days nearly.'

247—DANIEL STEARNS, b., Aug. 18, 1743; md., Nov. 27, 1788, by Rev. Timothy Harrington, in Lancaster, Mass., Deborah Carter, by whom he had twin daughters. Socially, he was rather aristocratic, and, like his brother, somewhat literary, having published a book of some kind, which, it is safe to say, is now out of print. In politics, he was a Tory, and, in Revolutionary times, his property, which was considerable, was confiscated, and he fled to England. He d., Jan. 30, 1818, of dropsy, and his widow, Deborah, d., Oct. 10, 1834, of old age.

His fatherly grief, on the death of his son, Dr. Obed Stearns, found vent in verse, written in a nice, clear hand, of which one stanza is appended:

God grant to me and my dear wife,
All needed grace while in this life,
To bear the chastenings of His rod,
And give true homage to our God."

His death occurred, Apr. 23, 1808; twelve children.

367—ESTHER STEARNS, b., Apr., 13, 1749; md., Oct. 19, 1773, Abraham Andrews, of Concord, Mass., and settled in Lovell, Me., where she d., Mar. 11, 1799, and he d., July 13, 1823.

"Capt. Abraham Andrews was born Sept. 6, 1747, in Ipswich, Mass.; a cooper by trade; served several terms of enlistment in the Revolutionary War and sank all his means in Continental money. After the war he removed, with his family, to Maine and settled on a free lot of land containing 100 acres. His wife, Esther (Stearns) Andrews, came to her death from hardships and privations endured in that new country, while trying to raise her family. She had been well-bred, and it was a terrible change to leave her comfortable, prosperous home and go to a howling wilderness,

THE PITCHER, represented above, was made in England and is a valued heir-loom now held by Mr. Isaac Stearns, (No. 4257), recently a Principal of Public Schools in Hempstead, Long Island, but now (1900) retired and residing in the Borough of Brooklyn, N. Y.; it having descended according to English usage through the eldest sons from his great grandfather, the Hon. Isaac Stearns, of Ballerica, Mass., (No. 366), to whom it was presented by American admirers in recognition of his great services to country and State during the Revolutionary War.

The coat of arms shown on this pitcher differs from those previously borne by the family, the distinctive changes being doubtless of Mr. Stearns' own choosing. He retained the three crosses upon a golden shield, but discarded the chevron, the warlike helmet and the migratory starling, substituting the garland and mantle of roses and forget-me-nots, showing that the family need not again take wing to any other country nor join in further knightly crusades, and that it should be decidedly Christian, even in a triple sense; also that they might now expect the comforts, prosperity and happiness so graphically represented by the golden shield and the beautiful flowers. How prophetic this has proven to be we can all attest. On the front of the pitcher is shown the honored name and the Coat of Arms of his country. The remaining side shows a motto and broken chain surrounded by designs which speak volumes. The Goddess of Plenty with a spray of wheat and cornucopia of fruit; the Goddess of War with cornucopia of flowers and torch inverted, in token of Peace, but ready to be raised at any moment; our flag is shown, also emblems of war, both ancient and modern; the whole surmounted by a mammoth screaming eagle, all suggestive of conscious strength and the great joy which then filled the hearts of our brave ancestry.

such as the backwoods of Maine was at that time. Capt. Andrews died suddenly of heart-disease."

H., Mar. 8, 1758, where he d., July 25, 1788, of cancer of the lip. He md. (1), Dec. 4, 1755, Sarah Abbott, b., Dec. 4, 1726, dau. of Uriah and Elizabeth (Mitchell) Abbott, of Andover, Mass. She d., Nov. 5, 1766, and he md. (2), Aug. 13, 1767, Sarah Ruggles, b., Nov. 6, 1731, who d., Apr. 2, 1808, dau. of Rev. Samuel and Elizabeth (Williams) Ruggles, of Billerica, Mass. He had six children by each wife. He was a close and careful student of the original Scriptures, and so familiar with the Bible that he could readily cite the chapter and book where almost any verse was to be found. In the Revolution, he was an ardent friend of liberty, gave his sons and sacrificed most of his worldly treasure to the American cause. He was a member of the State Convention at Exeter, Mass., in which he committed himself fully, even to the risk of his personal safety. On returning from it, he said to his children: "If the cause prevail, it will be a great benefit to the country; but, if it fail, your poor old father's head will soon be a button for a halter." Rev. Mr. Stearns was tall in person and interesting in his pulpit performances. He held the untiring attention of his audience, which, frequently, filled the seats and aisles of his meeting-house, while, in pleasant weather, numbers stood around the doors and windows. The following anecdote illustrates the dignity and influence of his character: He happened to pass through a room, where a party of military officers were engaged in very free and profane conversation. The individual, who was speaking at his entrance, suddenly stopped and seemed abashed. His comrades rallied him on his timidity, as soon as Mr. Stearns disappeared. "Rev. Stearns would awe the devil," was the officer's immediate reply. Rev. Dr. Tappan, Prof. of Divinity in Harv. Univ., says: "The Rev. Mr. Stearns sustained a character too great and too good to be passed over in silence. The God of Nature had endued him with singular abilities, which, by the aid of erudition, fitted him for extensive usefulness. Elevated by the purer sentiments, he ever possessed a mind calm and serene. God, who is all-wise in council, was pleased to try his faith and patience in the furnace of affliction. After a lingering and painful sickness, he died, of a cancer, in the fifty-seventh year of his age. In him, died a friend of justice, liberty, and energetic government, a vigorous watchman, a patient guide, an affectionate pastor, a prudent, kind husband, and an indulgent, but truly faithful parent. More joyful than a conqueror with his spoils he retired from the present scene of action. We trust that he has gone to a state of immortal bliss, and will be an associate of those who have come out of great tribulation."

His parents were slave holders and he held pro-slavery views after coming to the North. His sentiments became anti-slavery through the influence of Dr. Channing's works, and he studied for the ministry with Rev. Samuel J. May, who became his warm personal friend and whose life he afterwards edited. He was called to the editorial chair of the Christian Register in Jan., 1872, and under his management, it became one of the ablest religious papers in the country. He d., Aug. 29, 1877, at his home in Dorchester, Mass., after a short illness, leaving a widow and one son. Elizabeth Goodrich (Warren) Mumford was a teacher before her marriage, and, after her husband's death, opened a private school in her own house. She is a writer of acknowledged merit and is in the front rank of S. S. service in the Unitarian church, being one of the Vice Presidents of the N. Y. League of Unitarian Women, and Vice Pres. of the N. Y. Unitarian S. S. Union. We gratefully acknowledge the comprehensive records she has furnished for this work. In 1783, they moved from Attleboro to Tolland, Conn., and in 1792, he went to Mt. Pleasant, Wayne Co., Pa., reaching there on the 5th of March, with his two sons, James and Otis. In the early fall, Mr. Stearns returned to Conn. for his wife and six other children, and, with them, commenced the privations and hardships of pioneer life. His son, Jabez, was the first male child born in the town. "Wayne Co. was then a wilderness, with the red men lurking in ambush and the bear, panther and wolf roaming unmolested. On one occasion Mrs. Stearns took her infant son, Ashbel, into the woods with her to save some sap that was wasting. Laying him in a sap trough, she went about gathering the sap and, on her return, was horrified to see a large bear on a log beside the improvised cradle, in the act of seizing it with his distended jaws. With a wild shriek Mrs. Stearns fell forward, while their dog, Carlo, attacked Bruin and compelled him to retreat. At one time, being destitute of meat, Joseph was very much discouraged. His wife, believing in an over-ruling Providence, placed the kettle over the fire and said, "Now I have done my part, and believe the Lord will do His." Before the water boiled, a fawn, apparently frightened, entered the field where the boys were at work and was caught by them." He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and they remained at his father's house, after their marriage, until the close of the war. "He was plowing in the field when the battle of Lexington was announced; left his team and started, but it was over before he reached there. Two of the eight men killed that day were his cousins; he helped sink the British ship, Roebuck." at Hellgate." He had ten children.

He commanded a company of militia during most of the Revolutionary War, and was afterwards a Colonel. "On the evening of Feb. 13, 1787, Gen. Benjamin Lincoln's command, of Worcester, marched against the insurgents under Capt. Daniel Shay, with Col. Ephraim Stearns's regiment in advance. For thirty miles, from Hadley to Petersham, the troops marched that night through an almost mountainous country, and, during the latter part of the way, faced a violent storm. Drifting snow impeded their steps and it grew so intensely cold that the majority of the force was frost-bitten. To the hardiest soldier that terrible night's march was something to be remembered for life. Within twelve hours after receiving the order to move, the advance guard had reached its destination, on Sunday morning. The in-surgeons were taken by surprise and fled in hot haste, scattering in every direction." He md., 1764, Prudence Wilder, b., Sept. 16, 1746, who d., Mar. 29, 1825, and he d., Sept. 2, 1808; ten children.

Y., and the following notice appeared in the Jamestown Journal:

“Of those who sleep in dust so cold,
 Forever hid from human view,
 Should many a tender tale be told,
 For many a tender thought is due..

Died, in this village, at the residence of his son, William Stearns Jr., on the fourteenth inst., Capt. William Stearns, in the eightieth year of his age, leaving eleven children. Capt. Stearns was a native of Worcester, Mass., but had resided in this county some time, and we think it due to every patriot of 1776, to add a paragraph to their memory. He stood, as a minute-man, within a few miles of Boston at the time of the destruction of the British tea there. He was stationed near Boston, in the regular service, at the time it was evacuated by the British forces, and took an active part in the battle of White Plains. He lived to see those dearly-bought rights cherished and maintained by several generations and to feel that he had helped to secure that liberty which now blesses our American millions. Some twenty years of the latter part of his life were spent in public office, being, at one time Sheriff of Worcester Co., Mass. As an officer he always bore a high reputation for honesty and fidelity; as a private citizen, was of unblemished character; as a friend, true and faithful; as a neighbor, kind and obliging. Until his last hours, he had never had any disease prey upon his system, had never submitted to a surgical operation, nor received any medicine from the hands of a physician. A few years previous to his decease, he gave evidence of a hope of eternal salvation through the merits of our blessed Savior, although he was not a member of any religious sect.”

He was the father of fifteen children.

829—ALFRED STEARNS (1887), b., Sept. 11, 1804.

830—DR. WILLIAM STEARNS (313), b., Apr. 10, 1754, son of Peleg and Elizabeth (Harris-Swineton) Stearns, of Charlestown, Mass.; grad. Harv. Coll., 1776; studied medicine with Dr. Joshua Brackett, of Portsmouth, N. H., and commenced practice with Dr. Hall Jackson, of Marblehead. He soon relinquished the practice of medicine, and, after qualifying himself under the instruction of a chemist in Boston, he commenced the business of apothecary and grocer, in Salem, Mass., where he was very successful. A correspondent says: "He never spoke ill of a person and was the most singularly honest man I ever knew." He represented his town repeatedly in the State Legislature, often held municipal offices, and was most fond of that of Overseer of the Poor, as affording him the greatest opportunity to gratify his benevolent feelings. He was noted for hospitality and public spirit. He took the lead in making the turnpike from Salem to Boston, and, at one time, owned one-eighth of the stock. The first large block of buildings in Salem was his. The night before the battle of Bunker Hill, he was employed the whole night in throwing up breastworks, and, during the action, was taking care of his parents at their farm at Plowed Hill. In the yard at the rear of their house, Major McCleary was killed by a ball or shell from the hill. Dr. Stearns md., Dec. 9, 1781, Sarah White Sprague, dau. of Major Joseph Sprague, of Salem, and grand-dau. of Col. James White, of Atkinson, N. H., at whose residence she was born, Nov. 26, 1764. She was a descendant of Ralph Sprague, who, with his brothers, William and Richard, came over in the same vessel with Gov. Endicott and settled in Charlestown. She was also a direct descendant of William White, the first settler of Haverhill, Mass.; and of Rev. James Bailey, the first minister of Danvers, then called Salem Village; and of John Johnson and his wife, who were both killed by the Indians, and their house burned, when Haverhill was sacked by the Indians, in 1708. She d., Jan. 29, 1844. Dr. Stearns d., May, 1819, aged 65 yrs.; ten chil.

831—JOSEPH E. STEARNS, b., Sept. 9, 1782; grad. Harv. Coll., 1804; High Sheriff of Essex Co. His name was changed from Stearns to Sprague by legislative enactment, at the request of his grandfather. He studied law with Hon. William Prescott, and settled in Salem, his native town. After practicing law a short time, he became an ardent politician of the Democratic party, was an intimate friend of Judge Story, a friend and correspondent of John Quincy Adams and wrote numerous political papers. He was Dept. U. S. Marshal under Thomas Jefferson, and Postmaster from 1815 to 1829. In 1811, he was appointed Clerk of the County Court by Governor Gerry, which office he held only for a short time. In 1830, he succeeded his father-in-law (Hon. B. Bartlett) as High Sheriff of Essex Co., and held the office until 1851. He md. (1), Aug. 31, 1808, Eliza Bartlett, dau. of Hon. Bailey Bartlett, of Haverhill. She d., Apr. 16, 1817, and he md. (2), May 13, 1819, Sarah Leonard Bartlett, sister of his first wife. He d., Feb. 22, 1852; nine children.

858—AARON STEARNS (320), b., Feb. 2, 1746, son of John Jr. and Anna (Coolidge) Stearns, of Watertown, Mass.; md., Feb. 6, 1766, by David Osgood, Esq., Esther Glazier, of Westminster. Her name is given in one record as "Glasure." "In those early days, a young man named Bellows received a General's commission in the Mass. Militia, and, for some extra service in the Indian wars, was given, by King George, the grant of a large tract of land in the Connecticut Valley, in the present States of New Hampshire and Vermont, containing the greater part of the township of Walpole on the east side of the river, and Westmoreland and Rockingham on the west side. When Gen. Bellows concluded to settle on his grant of land, he induced the two Stearns brothers, Moses and Aaron, to accompany him, by promising them their choice in farms at their own price. He, being owner of the land, had first choice, and selected a tract in the center of the township. Aaron Stearns came in next and chose three hundred acres about two miles north of the center, known as "The Valley," and paid Gen. Bellows twenty-five cents per acre, or seventy-five dollars for the tract. Moses Stearns selected next six hundred acres adjoining Aaron's and running back to the hill, for which he paid twenty cents per acre, or one hundred twenty dollars for the whole. At the breaking out of the Revolution, Aaron Stearns and his nephew, the "Deacon," eldest son of Moses Stearns, enlisted for the war and were under Col. Stark at the battle of Bennington. Esther (Glazier) Stearns was left with a family of small children, the eldest ten years of age, to get a living and carry on the farm as best they could during the seven years' struggle. At the close of the Revolution, Aaron returned to his family and the 'Deacon' to his father, Moses, who had improved his farm and built a substantial house, which has since been occupied by his descendants; the estate, according to English custom, always descending to the eldest son, the rest being sent off to open up new countries." Aaron Stearns settled, late in life, in Langdon, N. H., where he d., Sept. 11, 1807, and his widow, in 1820. Their first four children were born in Westminster, Mass., the others in Walpole, N. H.; eight children.

When a youth of fourteen, Henry Bond accompanied his father to New York, Mar. 1776, from there to Canada, and was with his father at his death, soon after which he returned home. He, with his bride, in June, 1790, moved to Livermore, Me., where he had previously purchased land and one-half of the first grist and saw mills erected in the town. He was one of the first deacons of the first church organized there, and, in the winter of 1794, was the second schoolmaster of the town. The first schoolhouse, there, was built a short distance north of his mills. He d., Mar. 27, 1796, leaving two children, and his wid. md. (a)—Henry Bond Jr., son of Henry and Hannah (Stearns) Bond, was born Mar. 21, 1790, in Watertown, Mass.; grad. Dartmouth Coll., 1813; was tutor there nearly two years; A. M., 1816; M. D., 1817; settled first in Concord, N. H., and, in Nov., 1819, moved to Philadelphia, where he resided, unmarried, devoted to his profession. He was the author of several articles in the Medical Journals, and of "The Genealogies and History of Watertown, Mass," which is unrivaled by any similar work ever published in this country and that part of his genealogies pertaining to the Stearns family has been reproduced in these pages. We consider it due to the author to reprint here a memoir of this remarkable man, from the pen of Horatio Gates Jones, A. M., Cor. Sec. of the Hist. Soc. of Penn. "In the month of March, 1806, Henry Bond commenced his academical course, at Hebron Academy, and remained there until Sept., 1809, when he was admitted to the freshman class of Dartmouth Coll., and was duly graduated, in Aug., 1813. While in college he exhibited a fondness for the exact sciences, and was considered a good mathematician. When he was grad. his class numbered forty-one, although, during the sophomore year, it had as many as sixty members. Among his classmates were Rev. Joseph B. Felt, LL. D.; Rev. Benjamin F. Farnsworth, D. D., Rev. Austin Dickinson, Frederick Cushing, M. D., and Rev. Rufus William Bailey. Immediately after his graduation, Henry Bond commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Cyrus Perkins, who was Prof. of Anatomy in Dartmouth Coll., and Dr. Nathan Smith, Prof. of Surgery. In Mar., 1815, he was elected a tutor in the college and resigned in Aug., 1816. The period he spent there as tutor was full of interest and excitement, for it was in the midst of the troubles about the charter of Dartmouth Coll., the history of which has become incorporated with the judicial decisions of our country, and is so closely connected with the fame of New Hampshire's noblest son,—the lamented Webster. In Dec., 1816, Henry Bond received his medical degree, and, early in the following January, commenced the practice of his profession in Concord, N. H. During his residence there, he delivered each summer for three years a course of popular lectures on chemistry, and, at the same time, continued his general literary studies. In 1818, he was chosen to deliver the oration before the New Hampshire Alpha of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, and selected as his theme, 'Traits of American Genius.' The mss. of the oration shows that devotion to his profession had not produced a distaste for the paths of literature. Having relatives in Augusta, Me., Dr. Bond concluded to settle there, but, wishing to perfect himself in a knowledge of his profession, in November, 1819, he went to Philadelphia to attend lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, whose medical department, there as now, enjoyed a world-wide reputation. Here he formed several new and strong friendships—and when, in 1820, he was about to remove to Augusta, where an office had already been engaged, he was persuaded to make Philadelphia his permanent abode. His trunks had been packed for his departure, but the inducements offered were so kind and generous, that he consented to stay. He accordingly commenced the practice of medicine in Philadelphia in the spring of 1820, and, having, as a new beginner, considerable leisure, he taught, at his office, classes in practical and general surgery. These classes were well attended and were continued for several years. The character of the medical profession of Philadelphia has always been high-toned, and, in a great measure, exclusive. Hence, it so happened, that the societies which the earlier physicians of Philadelphia formed for their mutual improvement, were difficult of access, except by those of acknowledged merit. Yet, in Dec., 1819, Dr. Bond was elected an honorary member of the Philadelphia Medical Society and he continued to be an active member of it, until it became extinct. In 1823, there was organized, in Philadelphia, the Kappa Lambda Society, the object of which was medical improvement, with special reference to medical ethics. Of this society he became an early member, and was, for some time, its secretary. In May, 1824, he delivered an address before the New England Society of Philadelphia, which was published, at the request of the society. Having once attained a position and giving evidence of professional eminence, as well as personal worth, Dr. Bond found himself gladly welcomed by his medical brethren into their societies and private coteries. In the course of several years, he was successively elected a Fellow of the Philadelphia College of Physicians, in 1825; its Secretary, 1832; one of its censors, in 1844. In 1840, and again in 1850, this college sent him as a delegate to the Decennial National Convention, held in Washington City, for revising the United States' Pharmacopoeia. In May, 1846, he attended the first Medical Convention which met in New York to organize a National Medical Association, and he generally attended its subsequent meetings. In 1847, he was a member of the convention held in Lancaster, Pa., for the purpose of organizing a State Medical Association, and he was one of the committee which drafted the constitution. He was also a member of the Board of Health of the city of Philadelphia from 1833 to 1838, and its President during 1837-8.

It is thus seen that Dr. Bond's talents and professional ability were appreciated by his brethren—those who are supposed to be the best judges—and this was all the more flattering from the fact that he himself was modest and retiring to a fault. He had energy, perseverance and talents, but he was not obtrusive and hence he was indebted to his own sterling merit for his advancement. In due course of time he attained considerable practice, which continued to increase from year to year, until, by habits of careful economy, he had acquired a competency sufficient for his support; but, even then he did not desist from active duties, until failing health and devotion to a new study compelled him to husband his strength. His chief branch of practice was obstetrics, to which he paid much careful attention and in which he was very successful. He was accustomed to make a note of every such case that was under his care, and a small volume, still preserved, shows the exactness with which he noted every event connected with his obstetrical practice. His mechanical as well as surgical knowledge was particularly displayed in contriving some useful instruments and apparatus, which are now in general use by the profession, and which will long perpetuate his name as one of the benefactors of mankind.

But the great work of Dr. Bond, to which he devoted the latter part of his life, and in which he became so deeply and engrossingly interested, was "The Genealogies and History of Watertown." This remarkable book, which attained its present magnitude from a very small beginning, originated in the preparation of a Genealogy of the Bond Family, which Dr. Bond had begun as early as 1840. At first, he designed it to be a mere family memorial, but, as he advanced in his researches, he found that much material, other than what he first sought, grew upon his hands, and then the idea occurred to him of making it general in its character, so as to include all the early families of his native town. The work was begun and as it advanced the author seemed to appreciate the importance of the researches in which he was engaged. His views are worthy of special notice. He believed that, "Genealogies, besides gratifying a natural and enlightened curiosity, may exercise a salutary influence, tending to maintain in their social position families already elevated, and to elevate the lowly," and he also firmly held, "that when persons affect an utter indifference to their lineage, or a history of the past generations of their families, and deride any attention to them as a foolish weakness and vanity, they are contravening an innate principle, and it may be generally suspected that they have some knowledge of a lineage they would consign it to oblivion, because it is untitled and without good renown. While pursuing his investigations, Dr. Bond visited various localities in New England, and spent much time in examining town records for facts not to be found elsewhere. He employed persons to make copies of records and other valuable documents and was materially aided by his friend, Horatio G. Somerby Esq., who made researches for him in England. His correspondence on this subject extended throughout the whole country, and he hesitated at no expense or trouble to unravel some disputed point or make clear some intricate genealogy. For several years he gave nearly all his leisure time to the collecting and arranging of the materials thus gathered from every quarter, and when he had so far succeeded as to bring this heterogeneous mass of dry and dull statistics into shape, he submitted the question of immediate publication to his friends, and, by their advice, the first part was printed, but not published, in 1852. This was done, as may be remarked of the entire book, with the greatest diffidence on the part of the author, who was as sensitive of the world's opinion of his effort, as if he were freshly entering the arena. So modest were his own ideas of the value of his work, and so reluctant was he to speak of it, that the book was nearly completed before even his professional associates knew that he was engaged in such a labor. To one, who, entering the Doctor's study, found him reading proof, he remarked, "I shall let you see this now, but don't speak of it to others." To the writer, who made his acquaintance while in the midst of the publication, the Dr. said that he did not care to have people know what he was doing, as they would be sure to laugh at him. This may have been owing to the fact that, in Philadelphia, little attention is paid to genealogical studies. The great work was finally completed and given to the public in 1855. It met with warm praise both at home and abroad, and the doctor's heart was often made glad by receiving from his friends their commendatory letters.

It does not become the writer of this memoir to criticise the great work as a literary labor, or as a correct and truthful Genealogical History of the Watertown Families. It speaks for itself, and will ever remain an enduring witness of the untiring energy, the unflagging research, and the indomitable zeal of its respected and lamented author. But this much he can say, that when the last page was written and the pen laid aside, Dr. Bond might have exclaimed without fear of being criticised for egotism, "Exegi monumentum, aere perennius."—for when the marble which marks his resting place shall have crumbled to ruins, this work will survive, and succeeding years, as they rapidly haste away, will only add increased lustre to his name and embalm it in the minds of the thousands who shall yet tread the soil of his own loved New England.

It has been stated that Dr. Bond was well known, beyond the limits of his own profession, as a lover of antiquarian researches. His renown as a student in this department led to his election to various posts of honor throughout the country. In addition to the societies already named, he was also chosen a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences, the National Institute, the American Statistical Association, the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, the American Antiquarian Society, and the Historical Societies of the States of Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, Wisconsin and Massachusetts.

In the month of August, 1858, Dr. Bond visited New England, and was warmly received by his large circle of friends. Within a month after his return to Philadelphia, while passing through the grounds of Washington Square, he was suddenly stricken down with paralysis and although he rallied afterwards yet his nervous system was completely shattered, and his mind was much impaired. For many years he had suffered from an affection of the heart, and this sudden prostration of his powers produced a marked change in his general health. He still kept up his correspondence—corrected his large Genealogical Work—visited a few patients—and always seemed glad when friends called to see him; but it was apparent that his days were numbered. On the morning of the fourth of May, 1859, he was found lifeless in his room. It is supposed that, during the night, he had risen to procure something, and either had an attack of apoplexy, or, fell down and struck his temple. On the Saturday following his death, he was interred in the Laurel Hill cemetery, near Philadelphia. His funeral was attended by a large number of his medical and personal friends, and the religious services were conducted by the Rev. Albert Barnes, of whose church, the First Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, he had been a member for many years. Dr. Bond, at the time of his decease, was in the seventieth year of his age. He had never been married. He left a will dated Apr. 3, 1858. After devising the bulk of his estate for life to three of his near relatives in Philadelphia, he makes Dartmouth College his residuary legatee and directs the income to be appropriated to the purchase of books for the college library. He couples with this legacy the following directions: "Any student of the college of the name of Bond, a descendant of William Bond, Esq., and his wife, Sarah (Bisco) Bond, who settled in Watertown, Mass., as early as the year sixteen hundred and fifty (1650), shall be entitled to receive and shall receive of the income of this legacy to the college, one hundred dollars a year, so long as he shall continue an undergraduate at said college." He also bequeathed to the college for their library all his miscellaneous books, including those relating to history, genealogy and antiquities, not otherwise disposed of.

To the New England Historic-Genealogical Society he bequeathed his inter-leaved copies of the Watertown Family Memorial; his manuscript books or papers pertaining to town or church histories, including his scrap-book, containing the records of birth, deaths and marriages in Woburn; also his files of letters relating to genealogy or antiquities; and all the unbound copies of the Watertown

Memorial. These MSS. are exceedingly valuable, comprising, with his correspondence, his entire collection of materials, from which he prepared his great work on Watertown. The copies of the Memorial number at least one thousand volumes; and the Society, to show their estimate of this legacy—the first which has ever been bequeathed to them—have placed them in the hands of trustees, who design to invest the proceeds arising from the sale of the book, in a fund, which, out of regard to the donor, is to be called “The Bond Fund.” The trustees of this fund are Messrs. Almon D. Hodges, Frederic Kidder and John Ward Dean.

As a man, Dr. Bond was most highly esteemed wherever known. As a Christian, he was sincere and honest. He was a regular attendant and member of the Presbyterian church, a believer in the great doctrines of the Christian faith, who availed himself of church privileges, but was not actively engaged in outward religious duties. He seemed averse to the exhibition of emotional feeling in that which related to spiritual life. As a physician, he occupied a high position, especially in the city where he lived and died.

D. Francis Condie, M. D., of Philadelphia, a leading member of the medical profession, in a recent communication to the writer, says: “Dr. Bond was well-grounded in both the theory and practice of all the branches of the healing art. His favorite branches were, however, surgery and obstetrics. In both of these departments he devised several original instruments and apparatus, and suggested important modifications of one or more of those in common use, all of which have received the sanction of the most distinguished practitioners. The practice of Dr. Bond was by no means confined to the departments just referred to. In that which embraces the pathology of therapeutics of internal diseases generally, he had an extensive clinical experience, the results of which afforded a favorable evidence of his expertness as a medical practitioner.

“The mind of Dr. Bond was marked by depth and solidity, rather than by quickness and brilliancy and applied itself with the utmost zeal to the cultivation of the exact sciences—such as demand close and cautious investigation and are based solely upon demonstrable truths. He was averse to every species of hypothetical reasoning, and had little faith in any proposition sustained by a chain of collateral arguments rather than by positive facts. He was slow in the formation of his judgments, but when finally determined, it was no easy task to shake his confidence in their correctness.

“The position which Dr. Bond held, as a member of the medical profession, was one of the highest respectability. It was among those who had an opportunity to become fully acquainted with his medical knowledge and skill—his classical attainments—the sincerity and truthfulness of his character—his stern integrity—and to experience, day after day, his unfailing urbanity of deportment, that he was appreciated at his true value. In Philadelphia, which was the field of his entire medical career. Dr. Bond enjoyed the respect and confidence of his professional brethren. With all their organizations, with scarcely an exception, he was affiliated, and upon him was conferred almost every office of trust and honor within their gift; and he was made the recipient of such honors as indicated the high estimate formed by his medical brethren of his attainments—professional, classical and literary—as well as of his moral worth.”

Such is a brief sketch of the life and labors of one, whom to know, was to esteem most highly; whose memory will long be cherished by a large circle of warm and attached friends, and whose name will ever occupy a high rank among the generalists of America.

He was a soldier in the siege of Boston for eight months and participated in the battle of Bunker Hill. Col. Prescott and Sergeant Stearns stood side by side in the re-doubt, as the British soldiers marched up the hill. The question was how near should they be allowed to approach for the fire to be most effective. The following conversation passed between them:

Col. Prescott—'Stearns, are they near enough?'

Sergt. Stearns—'No, not yet.'

Col. Prescott—'Are they now?'

Sergt. Stearns—'Not quite.'

Then, after a little pause, Sergt Stearns exclaimed, 'There, that will do,' and the order was given to fire, with the result so well known. Mrs. Mary (Crosby) Stearns drew a pension till her decease. "The Stearns property in Billerica has been for more than two centuries in the family. On these acres four Stearns families located, in different generations, and erected dwellings for their own accommodation. John Stearns, born 1765, built the present Stearns homestead and established a home on one quarter of the farm, where his grandson was a late owner. Among many treasured family relics is a rude picture, representing the family-tree, with a heart-shaped apple to record each birth in the family of John and Mary (Lane) Stearns, married Feb. 10, 1800, according to this record. The first fruit, on this family tree, was Franklin Stearns, b., 1802, who spent his life of four score years on this farm, with a faithful wife, who laughingly boasted "I was born in the year one." 1801. She was the last of thirteen children of Benjamin Lane, who lived near the Stearns settlement."

She d., Nov. 29, 1839, and their bodies are interred in Shawshine Cemetery, where a sarcophagus has been erected by a grateful posterity. "Abner Stearns was about nine years of age at the beginning of the Revolutionary War and was sleeping beside his brother, Solomon, when they were awakened at an early hour of Apr. 19, 1775, by their father, Lieut. Edward Stearns, who announced that the British were coming. Distinctly the reports of the musketry were heard, during the engagement, as they were wafted on the breezes of that April morning. He often entertained his family, in after life, with descriptions of his feelings on that day, and, of the activity of each member of the family old enough for service, in preparing food, running bullets and making cartridges. This experience developed his military inclinations and he became prominent in the militia of the state. His commission as Ensign of the Bedford Co., dated Oct. 17, 1793, bears the signature of Samuel Adams upon it, and is treasured, with many other military papers, by his descendants. He was also a mechanical genius and of an inventive turn of mind. He planned a machine for splitting leather, started a woolen factory, a grist mill and a machine for preparing dye-goods, also, ran a fulling-mill and a spinning-jenny of seventy-two spindles. The impression made upon the business world and in the mechanical arts by Capt. Abner Stearns, and his family, is of national repute." He had six children.

1069—REV. SAMUEL STEARNS (399), b., Apr. 8, 1770, son of Rev. Josiah and Sarah (Ruggles) Stearns, of Epping, N. H.; grad. Harv. Coll., 1794; Pastor of the Congregational Church in Bedford, Mass., where he d., Dec. 26, 1834. He pursued his theological studies under the direction of Rev. Jonathan French, of Andover, whose daughter, Abigail French, became his wife, May 9, 1797. "It is worthy of remark, that, during the whole of his protracted ministry of thirty-nine years, he was never absent from his people at any communion season but one which occurred about two weeks before his death." When the church was repaired and newly furnished, in 1886, a memorial window was consecrated to his memory. In this, the extended hand holding the uplifted cross is artistically represented, and the following inscription is seen:

"IN MEMORIAM.

Rev. Samuel Stearns, 1796-1834."

Mrs. Abigail (French) Stearns, wife of Rev. Samuel Stearns, was born, May 29, 1776, and died, Dec. 2, 1858.

“Wise and good, respected and beloved, she sleeps in Jesus, and her memory is precious.” “The body of Rev. Samuel Stearns was interred in the family vault of the old burial-ground at Bedford, and there remained until the death of his widow, Madam Abigail Stearns, in 1858, when they were both deposited in cemented vaults on the western slope of Shawshine Cemetery. Of their thirteen children, eleven reached maturity and no other Bedford family has exerted so great an influence in the world of letters. They all received the highest advantages for education that the schools afforded.”

The following epitaph is found in Shawshine Cemetery: “Peter, a Revolutionary soldier, freed slave of Rev. Josiah Stearns, of Epping, N. H., faithful hired servant of Rev. Samuel Stearns. Born, 1750, died, 1807.

A Good Christian.”

Peter “Freeman” served in the Revolutionary War and was freed by his master, Rev. Josiah Stearns, whose son, Rev. Samuel, met him in Boxford, Mass., many years after, took him to his home and cared for him until death. He was buried near the door of the tomb where the body of Rev. Samuel Stearns lay for many years.

1072—SAMUEL HORATIO STEARNS, b., Sept. 12, 1801; grad. Harv. Univ., 1823; d., July 15, 1837, unm. He was a feeble child, of a serious, thoughtful mind. He entered Phillips Academy, Andover, when little more than fifteen years of age, and united with the church in Bedford, of which his father was pastor, June 1, 1817. His course in Harvard was pursued with difficulty on account of physical weakness, but his part in commencement exercises was the Latin salutatory, and on taking his second degree, three years after, he delivered the master's valedictory in Latin. Mr. Stearns spent some months as teacher in Phillips Academy and joined the Junior class in the Theological Seminary, at Andover, in Dec., 1825, completing his course there in 1828. He preached in Philadelphia during the following winter, as an assistant to Dr. Skinner, and, after seasons of preaching in various churches, was ordained pastor of the "Old South Church" of Boston, Apr. 16, 1834. His health began to fail and he asked a dismissal from the church and society where his beautiful spirit and brilliant talents had been manifested so short a time. He spent months traveling through the mild latitudes of the continent, and was on his homeward journey, having reached Paris, when strength failed and he passed away. His remains were brought to this country and deposited in Mt. Auburn, Dec. 26, 1837, the fourth anniversary of his father's death.

- George W. Stearns d., Oct. 12, 1812. Josiah A. Stearns, A. M., Ph. D., was one of the veteran schoolmasters of Boston, whose intelligence, conscientious and untiring efforts have done so much to build up and perpetuate the excellency of our common school system. He was for thirty-nine years in the service of the city of Boston, as usher in the Adams, and head-master of the Mather, Lawrence and Norcross Schools. His former pupils, numbering tens of thousands, remember him as a careful, thorough teacher and a genuine, open-hearted friend. The following memorial is self-explaining:

CITY OF BOSTON.

In School Committee, Sept. 26, 1882. Resolved, That in accepting the resignation of Josiah A. Stearns, master of the Norcross School, this committee is glad to place upon the records a recognition of the many admirable qualities with which Mr. Stearns has advanced his office, through a teaching service, in the employment of the city, of more than thirty-nine years.

Resolved, That his most fitting memorial is in the love and veneration of the hundreds of men and women, whose youth he helped to train in high and noble ways, and who, in his old age, will continue to call him blessed.

Resolved, That we extend to him most cordial wishes that he may live long to enjoy the satisfaction of honor, love, obedience and troops of friends, which he has earned in his public work and private worth.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of the Board, and a copy thereof, properly engrossed, be sent to Mr. Stearns.

Adopted unanimously.

Attest: Phineas Bates, Jr., Sec.

Mr. Stearns was actively identified with the Masonic Fraternity for more than twenty-nine years. For years, he presided at the altars of the lodge, chapter and commandery. At his funeral, Columbian Lodge conducted the impressive burial service of the fraternity and Joseph Warren commandery performed escort duty. Mr. Stearns was also a veteran Odd Fellow, having been a member of the order more than twenty-five years. The old homestead at Bedford became his property after the decease of his mother and he lavished much of his ample salary on the transformation of the rocky acres into productive fields. He wrote several hymns of much merit and was active in planning and carrying out each "Memorial Day" service. Hé d., Sept. 8, 1883; unm.

The following notice of his death is taken from the Bellows Falls Times, of Apr. 25, 1895:

“One of the saddest occurrences for many years was the death by drowning of two of our most popular young men, S. N. Alexander Jr., familiarly known here from boyhood as “Ned,” and James Fitzgerald. They started out in a small cedar canoe, and were seen by several apparently enjoying their ride. Not returning that night, a search was instituted, and the canoe was discovered, caught in some willows about two miles below Putney, the paddles gone and no sign of the boys. There is no doubt that they perished in a whirlpool and undertow, just above Putney Station. Mr. Alexander was twenty-six years old, the youngest of three sons of one of the oldest residents of our town, who, as well as his estimable wife, is almost prostrated by this calamity. “Ned” was to have been married in June to Miss Carrie Lamson, and, for several weeks, carpenters have been at work remodeling the house they were to occupy. He was cashier of the Falls Mountain Co.’s Mill, and a great favorite with every one.” His mother adds this tribute: “From early boyhood, he looked with contempt on anything unmanly.”

From "Old Springfield, its inhabitants and mansions," by Charles Wells Chapin, we copy the following extract:

"Hon. Charles Stearns, son of Eli and Mary (Whitney) Stearns, was the most enterprising man of his day in Springfield. He early became an operator in real estate, and built and owned many houses. He was the originator and chief manager of the Springfield Aqueduct Company, which is now merged in the present city water works. His controversy with Gen. James W. Ripley, in regard to the change of management of the U. S. Armory from a civil to a military superintendency, occurred in 1845. A few years before the close of his life, he was engaged upon a history of Springfield, Mass., which has never been published, as the manuscript which he left was unfortunately destroyed."

"In 1854, Hon. Charles Stearns gave, to the city of Springfield, a plot of land, extending two hundred sixty feet from Worthington St. to Bridge St., and fronting eighty ft. on each. It contains a fountain and some trees, and was called Stearns Park. In 1845, there was trouble over a strip of land Mr. Stearns had bought of Col. Israel Trask in 1827. A U. S. engineer, after surveying the land, claimed it belonged to the U. S. Government, and, knowing that Mr. Stearns intended to cut the land into building lots, put up some sheds in front of Mr. Stearns's property in order to test the question. Mr. Stearns at once ordered his workmen to tear down buildings and fence and himself cut down the first fence post. Col. Ingersoll appeared and ordered the Stearns party away, but they refused to stir, and, although they had fierce words, no personal violence was done. This was called the "Stearns Riot," for which Mr. Stearns and men were arrested, and tried in Boston, with the verdict, 'Not guilty.' "

(2), Jan. 5, 1826, in Bowdoinham, Me., Mary Lunt, dau. of Joseph and Priscilla Lunt, of Litchfield, Me. He served an apprenticeship with James H. Foster, an upholsterer, of Boston. At eighteen years of age, he became a member of the First Baptist Church, of Boston, then under the pastoral care of Rev. Dr. Stillman, and, after serving his full term of apprenticeship, began earnestly to prepare for the Gospel ministry. He studied with Rev. Mr. Williams, of Wrentham, Mass., and, afterwards, with Rev. Dr. Greene, of North Yarmouth, Me. In the spring of 1806, he was licensed to preach, and was ordained at North Yarmouth, Me., Oct., 1807. He preached in Freeport, Me., for two years, and was installed first pastor of the First Baptist Church in Bath, Me., Dec. 6, 1810, which office he held until his decease. He was devoted to the cause of education and was one of the earliest founders and a trustee of Waterville Coll. "Silas Stearns was a man of high standards, superior talents, widely useful and honored." It is said by another: "That he was no Parson Pliable is evident from his readiness to be mobbed, even by his friends, for willingness to be present and support an anti-slavery lecturer, in the beginning of that fire-brand topic." Dr. Adam Wilson, who acknowledged indebtedness to him for relieving Dr. Wilson from skepticism when in Bowdoin Coll., said: "There are few of whom it could be written with such manifest truth, 'He was an Israelite, indeed, in whom was no guile.'" A sketch of Rev. Silas Stearns will be found in Sprague's annals of the American Baptist Pulpit. He had seven children.

2192—MARCELLUS LOVEJOY STEARNS was born in Lovell, Oxford Co., Me., Apr. 29, 1839. He made preparation for college at the Coburn Classical Institute, Waterville, Me. During vacations he taught school to earn the means necessary to obtain his education. As a teacher he was successful. In the fall of 1859 he entered Colby University, was a thorough, hard working student, and his scholarship was well above the average of his class. He was not graduated, though the honorary degree of A. B. was conferred upon him by his Alma Mater in 1877. True to his high ideals of patriotism and justice, he left college and enlisted as a private in Co. E., 12th Maine Volunteer Infantry.

Marcellus L. Stearns.

He was promoted to First Lieutenant in 1863. His first service was in the "Department of the Gulf," being with General B. F. Butler in New Orleans in 1862 and commanding for a short time the Government Schooner, Hortense, on Lake Pontchartrain. Lieut. Stearns was one of the volunteers of the "Forlorn Hope," at the siege of Port Hudson, to whom Congress voted medals in honor of their bravery and gallant conduct. He was also with Gen. N. P. Banks on the ill-fated "Red River Expedition" in the Spring of 1864. In June of the same year he was transferred to Virginia. Lieut. Stearns led several charges at Winchester with conspicuous gallantry, and in this battle received severe wounds. An extract from a letter written on the field to Capt. Stearns, father of the Lieutenant, says: "I write to inform you that on the 19th inst. your son was wounded in a charge upon the enemy near this place. He received a musket shot in the right arm, just above the elbow, which necessitated amputation near the shoulder. The charge was a most desperate one, and our brigade was in the very hottest part of it. Lieut. Stearns had his sword wrenched from his hand by a musket ball while bravely urging his men forward. Our forces charged the enemy three times before they finally gave way." Lieut. Stearns was then transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps, being commissioned Mar. 25, 1865, as Second Lieutenant, and assigned to Co. H, 20th Regt., V. R. C. He then studied law in the office of Josiah H. Drummond, in Portland, Me., until he was transferred to the Freedman's Bureau, under Gen. O. O. Howard, and sent to Wheeling, W. Va.; afterwards he went to Quincy, Fla., where he discharged the difficult, and often dangerous, duties of his place, firmly and conscientiously, winning the entire confidence and esteem of the freedmen and the dislike and opposition of the un-reconstructed rebels. He was mustered out of the U. S. Service Jan. 1, 1868, and continued his home at Quincy. In 1867 he was a delegate to the Republican State Convention, and was especially prominent as an organizer of his party. Just after his admission to the bar he was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention, which, under the reconstruction acts of Congress, formed a new State Convention. During the same year he was elected to the Legislature and was made speaker of the House of Representatives, which office he held for four years. As a speaker, he was careful and impartial in his rulings, and in spite of the bitter partisanship which prevailed, he secured the confidence of both parties in his official integrity. In 1869 he was appointed U. S. Surveyor General of Florida by President Grant. In 1872 he was elected Lieutenant Governor of the state and upon the death of the Governor in the next year he was inaugurated Governor, which office he filled for three years. Governor Stearns married Ellen Austin Walker, dau. of Rev. Horace D. Walker, of Bridgewater, Mass., Dec. 12, 1878. During the following year Governor and Mrs. Stearns made a tour of Europe, and returned Aug., 1887. He then removed to Atlantic, Cass Co., Ia. Here he was made President of the Atlantic National Bank, which place he held until compelled to resign by reason of ill health. On Jan. 4, 1890, he suffered a severe stroke of paralysis, and while on his way to the Hot Springs, Ark., his train was overturned, and his right shoulder fractured, so that his physician forbade his bathing. His last summer in life was passed at his boyhood home, in Lovell, where he died, Dec. 8, 1891. Lake Stearns, in Central Florida, was named in his honor.

"Her father, Stephen Bedlow 3d., was son of Stephen Badlam Jr., who was son of Gen. Stephen Badlam, who was son of William Badlam, of England. Stephen Badlam Jr. was Captain of a ship and lost at sea; a son was born and his name was recorded by the Town Clerk in characters that were difficult to decipher. After the death of the mother and Town Clerk, an uncertainty arose as to the real name, and it was decided to be Bedlow, which has been adopted by the descendants of the family, although Badlam was the family name in England. General Stephen Badlam joined the American Army, Apr. 19, 1775, and was commissioned General, but, on account of ill-health, was obliged to resign in 1776, but in 1799, was Brig. Gen. of Mass. 2213—ABIGAIL MARY STEARNS, b., July 24, 1822, in New Ipswich, N. H.; md., Oct. 28, 1847, Rev. Seneca Cummings. "Her early training was in the thrifty New England town where she was born; afterwards she studied at Mary Lyon's Mt. Holyoke Seminary, and became a successful teacher until her marriage. She and her husband served in missionary work under the A. B. C. F. M., in Foochow, China, from 1847 to 1855, being among the earliest missionaries there, and their help in the Foochow mission was appreciated by all the little band then gathered, which laid the foundation for the future work of that successful mission. They returned to this country in 1855, on account of ill-health, bringing two small children. Mr. Cummings died suddenly in the fall of 1856, and her health was never restored. A constant sufferer she was confined to her New Ipswich home for the last thirty years of her life, entering peacefully into rest, Nov. 16, 1895. Her intellectual powers and keen interest in her wide circle of friends and relatives made her the beloved center of family communication. Loving others she was herself beloved, and her quiet influence for good from her cheerful sick room will ever last with those who knew her. She kept pace with all good literature and improvements for the betterment of the world and the spread of Christian culture. Many were the kindly messages and helpful words she penned or spoke, and young people loved to talk with her and be her friends. It was a bitter disappointment, with her active temperament, to be shut in from work, and, especially, to give up her missionary life, but no one who knew her could doubt that she exemplified, in her patience and self-sacrificing zeal, the true spirit of the Christ she served."

2214—LUCY ESTABROOK STEARNS, b., Apr. 16, 1826, in New Ipswich, N. H.; grad., Mt. Holyoke Seminary, 1849. She md., Sept. 6, 1852, Rev. Charles Hartwell, of Lincoln, Mass., and they went, the same year, to Foochow, China, as missionaries of the Congregational Board of Foreign Missions.

2304—ONSLow STEARNS (1017), b., Aug. 30, 1810, son of John and Mary (Lane) Stearns, of Billerica, Mass.; one of the most distinguished sons of Billerica. "At seventeen years of age, he was a clerk in Boston, Mass.; in 1830, joined his brother, John, in Virginia, in the construction of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal. He then became interested in contracts for building various railroads about Philadelphia and Baltimore, and, as long as he lived, continued a remarkably successful railroad career. In all positions, his sagacity, ability and integrity were conspicuous and commanded the confidence of the public. In 1862, he was elected a member of the New Hampshire Senate, and, in 1863, became its President. Six years later, he was chosen Governor of New Hampshire and re-elected in 1870, though his consent to be again a candidate was reluctantly given. His administration of the affairs of the State was practical, non-partisan and highly successful, particularly so in managing the finances." He md., June 27, 1845, Mary Abbott Holbrook, dau. of Hon. Adin Holbrook, of Athol, and later, of Lowell, Mass. Their home was in Concord, N. H., where he d., Dec. 29, 1878. "To the performance of all his duties, he brought a more thorough equipment than was possessed by any man in New England and surpassed in completeness by few men in the country. Beginning at the foundation of railroad construction, there was no department in railroad management, with whose details he was not familiar. Few men have had imposed on them more arduous labors. To the performance of these, he devoted not only his days but many hours of the night, and to the pressure of their burden may be attributed his comparatively early death." He had five children.

2316—EDWARD HARRISON STEARNS (1023), b., Dec. 16, 1814, son of Capt. Abner and Anne (Russell-Estbrook) Stearns, of West Cambridge, Mass.; took a course of three years, at Andover, after which he taught school at Provincetown. He conducted the business of the home farm after the death of his parents; started the business of wool-carding; had a farm, at Stoneham, besides adding a planing-mill and general wood-working establishment. His buildings were destroyed by fire, after which he erected a set of fire-proof buildings. After improving saw-mill machinery in Cincinnati, O., Hamilton, O., and Covington, Ky., he bought lands in Erie, Pa., and, in 1860, was the founder of the Stearns Manufacturing Co., of Erie, Pa., the largest establishment of the kind in the West, and known throughout the world. The inventive genius of the father was an inheritance with his son. He was credited with over thirty patents, which was the outcome of his own mind and all proved successful and valuable. To the small shop erected in 1860, addition after addition was made and the business increased, until the name of the Stearns M'fg Co., was known wherever a belt of timber country was found.

Mr. Stearns was an ardent Abolitionist and not afraid to express his opinion in a decided manner. He was an exceedingly charitable man, always ready to assist one in trouble, but never ostentatious or making a show of good works. His adopted daughter, Mrs. William O. Mehl, writes, "During the last year of his life, he made the remark that what gave him much satisfaction was that, 'as far as I know, I have never wronged any one out of a dollar. He was a well-informed man, a profound thinker, a pleasing talker, and a man of the most upright and honorable character.'" In religious belief, he was a Swedenborgian. He md., Oct. 23, 1837, Harriet Cutter Raymond, dau. of William Raymond, of Charlestown, Mass.; d., Aug. 14, 1880, in Erie, Pa.; s. p.

2317—GEORGE SULLIVAN STEARNS (1024), b., May 17, 1816, son of Capt. Abner and Anne (Russell-Estbrook) Stearns, of West Cambridge, Mass.; took a short course of study at Andover, and, when eighteen years of age, went West to engage in the milling and lumber business. In 1840, he was at Cincinnati, O., engaged in printing and stereotyping; stereotyped the first copy of the Mormon Bible; became the leading manufacturer of printers' ink, and, in 1849, founded, with his brother, Henry, the Wadding business, one of the oldest manufacturing concerns in Cincinnati. The Dominion Wadding Co., of Montreal, Canada, is a branch of the same industry. He md., May 30, 1844, Amelia Stephenson, by whom he had nine children, and she was dau. of Wm. Stephenson, of England. He built a fine residence at Wyoming, O., was a founder, elder and trustee of the Presbyterian Church at that place, and d. there Nov. 24, 1889. The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, after an extended tribute of respect for him says: "He was a rich man, but he has left something better than gold to those who mourn his death; he loved honorable labor and died in the harness. Multitudes will mourn the death and revere the memory of George Sullivan Stearns." He had nine children.

2333—ALBERT THOMAS STEARNS (1025), b., Apr. 23, 1821, son of Capt. Abner and Anne (Russell-Estabrook) Stearns, of West Cambridge, Mass.; descended from families of Revolutionary fame on both sides, his mother being a daughter of Thomas Russell, of West Cambridge; spent a year in the grocery trade, at West Cambridge (Arlington), in the place of business known as the Russell store, which was rifled by the British in 1775. His mechanical taste was early manifested, and he started the lumber business, at Neponset, Mass., which has developed into a large enterprise, so that the A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., which includes father and sons, is well known throughout the country. They have introduced cypress lumber into New England, thus developing a new feature of the lumber trade. A mill is established at Apalachicola, Fla., where the Cypress Lumber Co. is under the personal supervision of his youngest son, Frederick Maynard Stearns.

Abner and Anne (Russell-Estabrook) Stearns, of West Cambridge, Mass.; attended Phillips Acad., Andover, for two years; in 1846, engaged in the manufacture of cotton-wadding. In 1850, he started for California, by way of the Isthmus of Panama, with machinery for a steam-laundry. The vessel proved unseaworthy, floated about on the Pacific for four months, and, all on board were allowed only four ounces of bread and a pint of water each, per day. When Mr. Stearns reached his destination he was a physical wreck, but rallied, set up his machinery and successfully established the first steam laundry in California. He also ran the first regular steam ferry between San Francisco and the present City of Oakland. On his return east he entered into the manufacture of cotton wadding, and has been Superintendent of the Union Wadding Co. from its beginning at Pawtucket, R. I. The Co. has mills at Augusta, Ga., managed by George Russell Stearns (2343), and at Montreal, Canada, managed by Harold English Stearns (2330), and by Deshler Falconer Stearns (2342).

The inventive genius of the family is well represented by Hon. H. A. Stearns. He has obtained a number of patents on cotton-gins, and the railway safety-gate is his patent. He has filled many important places of trust, and was elected Lieut. Gov. of R. I., in 1891. He is the largest stockholder in the Kilby Man'g. Co., of Cleveland, O., and has a cattle-ranch in New Mexico; is a member and liberal supporter of the Central Falls Congregational Church. He md., June 26, 1856, Kate Falconer, of Hamilton, O.; eight children.

D., 1853; inaugurated Pres. Amherst Coll., Nov. 22, 1854; LL. D., 1862. "He was taken to the church, as was the prevailing custom at that time, and baptized on the day of his birth, which was a cold Sabbath in March. He was a precocious scholar and very forward in the Latin language. The year after his graduation from Harvard, he spent in teaching, as principal of the Duxbury Acad., and there formed the acquaintance of his future wife. His course of Theology was taken at Andover. He was ordained pastor of the First Cong. Church in Cambridgeport, Dec. 14, 1831, and retained the position twenty-three years, then leaving, with reluctance, to enter upon a broader field of labor, as President of Amherst College, where he remained until his useful life was terminated by death, June 8, 1876. He was an active member of the Mass. Board of Education for eight years, and a leading light among the members of the corporation of Phillips Academy and the Theological Seminary at Andover. The Amherst College Church, or Memorial Chapel, was erected during the presidency of Dr. Stearns. The three rose-windows were given as testimonials of regard for the president, by Dea. Eckley Stearns, of Woburn, Mass., Gov. Onslow Stearns of New Hampshire, and the Church of Christ at Bedford, Mass. Dr. Stearns was Pres. of the Mass. Home Missionary Society for seventeen years.

"The people of Bedford who were associates of Dr. Stearns have delighted to honor this distinguished son of the town and rejoice that he found here a birthplace and early home; that he loved to turn his steps here, when active service permitted, and that the cherished hope of his declining years was to complete his life where it began. But this was not so ordered; death met him in the midst of activity with his baccalaureate sermon partly finished."

2426—SAMUEL STEARNS (1092), b., 1785, son of Jonathan and Molly (Wright) Stearns, of Billerica, Mass.; moved to Brewer Village, Me., in the early part of the nineteenth century, where he remained until his death, in 1842; a tanner and currier, also boot and shoe manufacturer; later in life was lumber dealer and ship-builder. "In politics he was a Whig; in religion, a Methodist; highly esteemed as a citizen and business man; of undoubted integrity and free from every biasing and corrupting influence or motive, especially with reference to dealings between men in fulfillment of contracts, discharge of agencies, trusts, &c." The orthography of the name was changed by this family to "Sterns," because a colony from Cape Cod, with whom Samuel Sterns transacted business, gave the "a" too much prominence in their pronunciation, and the descendants now living continue the same arrangement or form of spelling. He md., 1805, Emma C. Billish, of Brewer, Me., where he d., Nov. 7, 1842; ten children.

They resided in Worcester, Mass., Springfield, O., and Ashburnham, Mass.; had one child, which only lived four days. The following article was copied from one of the local papers of Ashburnham, at the time of Mrs. Wright's death: "For many years Mrs. Emma H. Wright has conducted a newsroom and variety store at the home place on Main St. She has, however, been most prominently known as local correspondent of "The Gardner News." While her brothers and sisters were musicians of high rank, Mrs. Wright's ability ran in a literary line and her work in this field was altogether acceptable. She possessed a breezy, original style, with a diction choice and poetic; in short, such a combination of talent was her portion as to render her productions always inviting. Her first service for the News was rendered about twenty years ago, describing the dedication of the Academy building, and her last work was the report of the burning of that building."

"His musical taste and ability were manifested at an early age and his proficient execution in boyhood is pleasantly remembered by the residents of his native town, Ashburnham, Mass. He played the bass viol in the Congregational Church before his stature would permit him to reach the strings, and Mr. Miller, the chorister, made a cricket for him to stand upon. After thorough study of the piano and organ with B. F. Leavens, and of the violoncello with Wulf Fries, he removed to Worcester in 1859, where he has been organist and director in several church choirs. But he is best known as a teacher and composer of music, including, in his compositions, masses, church music, piano studies and songs. Mr. Stearns has given an apt expression of his love for his native town and a sensitive appreciation of its scenic attractions, in several musical compositions, suggested by, and dedicated to the mountains and lakes of the landscape."

We take great pleasure in acknowledging here the work Miss Althea M. Stearns has done in collecting and arranging the genealogy of this branch of the family. At the beginning of this undertaking, nothing was known regarding the first wife of Rev. Ebenezer Stearns, of Stoughton, but the fact that such a person once existed. By her untiring efforts and continued correspondence, Miss Stearns finally established the first wife's identity as an ancestress of her own family and has carefully and minutely traced the descendants to the present generation, while ministering to the needs of a sick and aged parent. Would there were more like her in loyalty to family ties!

"Rev. Myron Newell Stearns ranked high as a minister of the Baptist denomination and a writer for religious journals. He was considered among the best of the pioneer teachers, and, at one time, held a professorship in the only Baptist college in Oregon. He underwent the hardships of pioneer life in the West, making a home for his family two thousand miles from civilization, among war-like Indians, who, at one time, savagely drove him from his home. All this called for a greater and different degree of bravery from that shown by many who fought for their country in the army." His first wife was mother of three children; his second wife, of four more.

"Payne Page Prim was born in Wilson Co., Tenn., May

2, 1822. He received a common school education with one and one-half years at an academy, after which he taught school to acquire means to secure a legal education. Was graduated from the Law Dept. of Cumberland Univ., Lebanon, Tenn., 1848; was admitted to the Tenn. bar in 1849, and practiced law in Sparta, White Co., Tenn., until 1851, when he sought new and broader fields at the West. Upon reaching Independence, Mo., he joined an immigrant train, crossed the plains to Oregon, by means of ox teams. He engaged in mining until 1856, when he resumed the practice of his profession, in Jacksonville, Ore., where he has since resided. He was elected Prosecuting Attorney of the First Jud. Dist. of Ore., in 1856, and, in 1857, was chosen delegate to represent Jackson Co., in the Convention called to frame a State Constitution, preliminary to the admission of Oregon into the Union. In 1859, he was appointed, by Gov. Whittaker, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the State, which position he held one year by appointment, then was elected and continued to hold it, until 1880. In 1882, he was elected State Senator for four years, and, when Mr. Cleveland became President, Judge Prim's friends urged his appointment to the Chief-Justiceship of Washington Territory. Their recommendations have become public property, and are given by such men as Hon. W. W. Thayer, Hon. L. L. McArthur, Governor Penoyer, Hon. James K. Kelly, and others. He gave up all business at the age of seventy-five, but is known to all as a man whose character has been above reproach in every walk of life, and who has taken a prominent part in developing the Judicial and Legislative branches of the State Government of Oregon." He visited Iowa in 1854, and removed there permanently in 1857. "Manna Stearns retained many of the characteristics of his Puritan descent and had a large portion of the self-sustaining, unyielding, independent character of his New England progenitors. He possessed naturally a strong mind, and although a descendant of God-fearing people, became, from some inexplicable cause, a materialist, who never obtruded his peculiar views on any one, but, when attacked, defended them with all the pertinacity of his nature. His judgment respecting ordinary matters of life was almost invariably correct. His hatred of dissimulation and hypocrisy was so intense that he often made enemies by openly and boldly rebuking such instances as came beneath his notice. He has left behind him many who will deplore his departure." He had four children.

in addition to the retail business began the manufacture of pharmaceutical preparations, both official and non-official. In 1871, his establishment was twice destroyed by fire, the second time resulting in serious loss; the business was established a third time, and from a beginning, where the entire working force consisted of himself and one girl helper, it has grown until the present laboratory covers twenty-four acres of floor space and affords employment to over 500 persons. In 1887, after forty years of active life, Mr. Stearns retired from the management of the business, leaving it in the hands of his sons, Frederick K. and Wm. I. L. Since his retirement he has devoted his leisure to extended travels in many parts of the world. His public spirited generosity is shown by his gifts of a large collection of musical instruments to the University of Michigan, and the Oriental Ethnological Collection to the Detroit Museum of Art, in recognition of which he was presented with an elegant bronze medal by the Museum in June, 1896. He had four children.

3267—FREDERICK KIMBALL STEARNS, b., Dec. 6, 1854, at Buffalo, N. Y.; md., Oct. 16, 1878, at Detroit, Mich., Helen E. Sweet, b., July 12, 1859, at Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Stearns is Pres. and Gen. Manager of the firm of F. Stearns & Co. He received his early education in Patterson's School at Detroit, and later entered the University of Michigan in the class of 1877. He later entered the firm of Frederick Stearns & Co., in the capacity of secretary and treasurer, and on the retirement of his father, in 1887, succeeded him as Pres. of the Company. During the twenty-five years in which Mr. Stearns has been actively connected with this establishment, he has done much toward placing his firm among the leading houses, of its kind, in the world. He is public spirited, and a liberal giver to all charities; an athlete, prominent in college games while fitting himself for the responsibilities of an important commercial position. He is in active sympathy with the world of Art and Music, and has the happy faculty of drawing good men about him as business associates and enjoying their highest respect and loyal support. He has four children.

3305—ALMIRA STEARNS, b., Sept. 18, 1836; d., Sept. 14, 1837.

3306—EZRA SCOLLAY STEARNS, b., Sept. 1, 1838, in Rindge, N. H.; "has always resided there, being educated in the public schools, by private tutors, and, in Chester, N. J., where he studied and taught at the same time. For several years he was manager and editor of a newspaper at Fitchburg, Mass., and, before that, was connected with publishing houses in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. In 1876, he published a History of Rindge, N. H., following it in 1877, with a History of Ashburnham, Mass., both works of great value for historical accuracy and literary skill. Mr. Ezra Stearns has always been actively, ardently and prominently a Republican, representing Rindge for five years in the Legislature; served in the State Senate in 1887 and 1889, and was holding a seat as representative when he was elected Secretary of State, in 1891; has been Moderator in Rindge, for more than twenty years. In the legislature Mr. Stearns could not fail to take an active part, as, in debate, he was keen, incisive, ready, with a wealth of satire that was both dreaded and admired. His committee assignments were always laborious, and therefore important, but he shirked none, winning credit in the committee-room, equal to that attained upon the floor. Among the duties of Mr. Stearns's first term as Secretary of State was the inauguration of the Australian ballot system, an arduous task, and its completion without an error was a rare tribute to the Secretary's methodical and careful conduct of the office. He is a well-read, scholarly man, and the degree of A. M., which he received from Dartmouth Coll., 1887, was a merited tribute to a studious gentleman of culture, who assumes nothing that is not won, and who concedes nothing that is not due."

Mr. Stearns is a member and Vice-President of the New England Genealogical-Historic Society; member of N. H. Hist. Association, and American Antiquarian Society; an Honorary Member of Minn. and New Jersey State Historical Societies and of the Fitchburg Hist. Soc. He was re-elected Sec. of State, for a term of two years, in Jan., 1899, and resigned the office in Mar., 1899. He has never married and resides in Rindge, N. H., engaged in literary pursuits.

Franklin Stearns d., June 10, 1888, in Richmond, Va., leaving a large estate. The following is an extract from a newspaper account of his life: "The short time and little schooling acquired in Madison Co., N. Y., may be counted out of his life's history, it was so brief and meagre. He early saw the importance of figures, and, by the time he became a man, was master of arithmetic, self-taught and acquired during spare moments. He worked on a railroad in Georgia, as overseer, in 1836, and went to work in a quarry, on the James River and Kanawha Canal, in the spring of 1837. Little did the poor stone-cutter think or hope that he would ever be a director of the grand canal he was helping to construct in such an humble way. He became a contractor on the canal, making some money thereby, and, in 1843, entered mercantile pursuits, in Richmond, Va., engaging in rectifying and manufacturing wines and liquors, until, in ten years' time, he had secured almost the entire trade of Virginia. In the space of twenty-five years, he accumulated property enough to be ranked the largest land proprietor in the 'Old Dominion.' Mr. Stearns always avoided public life, though, if he were an ambitious man and aspired to public honors, the highest within the gift of the people of Virginia would have been at his command. He was nominated to represent Richmond, in the State Constitutional Convention of 1867, but declined the honor. In 1868, he was Director of the Richmond and York River R. R., of the James River and Kanawha Canal, and also of the Chesapeake and Ohio R. R., besides being Director of several Richmond banks. But the greatest work of his life was his earnest aid to restore the 'Old Dominion' into the sisterhood of states. As a recognition of his eminent services on this behalf, the members of the General Assembly were anxious to confer the U. S. Senatorship, for the long term, on Mr. Stearns, but he declined the tempting offer. He was also offered the nomination for Governor of Virginia, but declined it.

"His greatest pleasure was read and his eyesight became much impaired thereby. Any A. M. might be proud of his fund of general knowledge, and his unbounded hospitality made him always happy when he had a house full of company."

This article was published some years before his death.

"The Great Rebellion," written by John M. Botts, of Virginia, mentions Mr. Franklin Stearns as follows:

"I was the first victim of loyalty in the state and Franklin Stearns, for his confidence in, his regard for, and his intimacy with me, was the second, and then came the imprisonment of one hundred and fifty others, to whose ranks constant additions were made."

"During the Civil War, Mr. Franklin Stearns was confined by the Confederates in his own warehouse, where his family was permitted to make him comfortable."

We copy the following from the "Hartford Post," of Thursday, Aug. 20, 1891:

"Samuel Stearns is ninety-one years old today. He was born at Waltham, Mass., Aug. 20, 1800, and was in the seventh generation of a family which had uniformly given its first born boy the name of Samuel. He has followed the time-honored custom and has one of the same name to succeed him, in family and in business. During the earlier years of his active life, he was engaged in house-building in the vicinity of Boston. He settled in Middletown, Conn., in 1826, and went into company with his younger brother, Edwin, under the firm name of E. & S. Stearns. After the death of his brother Edwin, Sept. 4, 1867, he continued the business alone, under the same firm-name for a while, and subsequently under the name of S. Stearns & Son, until he retired, in 1876, since which time it has been successfully carried on by his son, Samuel Stearns Jr.

"In politics, Mr. Stearns has always been a Democrat, and, in church relations, has been an honored member of the Universalist Church for more than half a century. For many years he has been one of the Directors of the Central Bank and has faithfully attended their semi-weekly meetings.

In 1838, Mr. Stearns bought the south-west corner of Broad and Court Sts., which was then only a miry cow-pasture, and built the fine house which he has since occupied as a family residence, and which is one of the best locations in the city.

During the present summer of 1891, he has visited Boston alone, remaining for a week, and nearly every day may be seen on the street, cheerful and pleasant, ready to exchange kind words with old friends." His ninety-first birthday was celebrated at the family home, and as another contemporary remarks:

"It was worth while to live so long to thus link decades for nearly a century. It appears as if the monarch of the scythe, while mowing around in younger pastures, looks kindly on Samuel Stearns Sr., bidding him carry his head erect, and live on, in blessed, youthful, old age. He is none of your dyspeptic, yellow-skinned old worthies, walking apologies for being out of the cemetery, but is lithe, lively and elastic, with excellent memory and entertaining conversation." His death occurred, Mar. 19, 1892; eleven children.

He lived in Paris, Me., until twenty-one years of age, when he went to Cambridge, Mass., and engaged in the livery and omnibus business, finally becoming proprietor of a line of hourlies running between Boston and Cambridge. A very interesting account of these traveling facilities is given in "Massachusetts of To-day," a memorial volume issued for the World's Columbian Exposition, at Chicago, Ill., in 1893, in which the development of these facilities is attributed to "the foresight and enterprise of Mr. Thos. Stearns and his coadjutors." In 1892, Mr. Stearns fell, and dislocated his shoulder, a shock from which he never recovered. In March of that year, he had attended the funeral of his cousin, Samuel Stearns (3500), of Middletown, Conn., being the only relative of the name present from Boston or vicinity, outside of the immediate family.

"His early education was received at the schools of Bath, Me., until, in 1875, he went into business with his brother-in-law, Mr. A. F. Warren, at Pensacola, Fla. He began there his study of fishes and other dwellers in the waters, and, through his various excursions, became familiar with all the ins and outs of the coast from Pensacola to Key West. In 1878, he visited the Smithsonian Institute, and by his thorough and exact knowledge of the Gulf fishes, their habits and economic value, attracted especial attention from Prof. Baird, Mr. Goode and others. The following year he spent at Waterville, Me., in classical studies at the Academy, for the benefit to be derived in scientific nomenclature—showing thereby that earnestness and energy of character which was an assurance of future success and honor. Failing health compelled him to return to Florida, and, in 1880, he became Special Agent of the U. S. Fish Commission, and also of the U. S. Census Bureau, in charge of investigations of the marine industries of the Gulf of Mexico. His reports show that his work was performed with accuracy and fidelity. From this time, his contributions to the Fish Commission became numerous and large, as the annual reports of the Commission show. Upwards of fifty new species of fishes were discovered by him, or through his help, embracing much of what is known of deep-water fishes of the Gulf, and four of the species—of the genera Lutjanus, Scorpaena, Blennius and Prionotus—bear his name. During these years in Florida, naturalists, investigating the fauna of the Gulf of Mexico, have had his untiring aid, have been guests under his roof and have sailed in his boats on their collecting tours. They found in him a generous and most estimable friend." Taken from American Journal of Science, Oct., 1888. Mr. Stearns died in Asheville, N. C., Aug. 2, 1888; one son.

Mrs. Stearns d., Apr. 8, 1872, of consumption, at her daughter's home in Baldwin City, Kas., and Mr. Stearns d., Aug. 3, 1879, at the same place. The following is taken from an article in the Akron, O., Daily Beacon: "Col. John Cooledge Stearns came to Ohio in 1826, and engaged in the arduous toil incident to life in a new country. He built, by contract, several miles of the Ohio Canal, and officiated as steersman on the first trip of the first boat run, called 'The State of Ohio,' which ran through to Cleveland, July 4, 1827. The country around was nearly an unbroken forest. He had a kindly heart, and those who knew him found him to be a just man, eminently conscientious, and making no compromise with wrong. At an early date, he espoused the cause of the oppressed slave, and was always a promoter of education and temperance. A few months before his death he abandoned the use of tobacco, to which he had been addicted for fifty years, giving, as a reason, that he wished to die clean. Of a family of nine children, he lived to bury all except one daughter, at whose home he spent the last eight years of his life. He was an earnest seeker after the truth, and conscientious in his religious belief in a Supreme Ruler and the immortality of the soul." He left a partial autobiography which has been of great service in these records.

Yours truly
Albert Stearns

Rindge, N. H.; md., June 3, 1858, Martha Louisa Snow, and settled in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was appointed Police Officer, Feb., 1854; was promoted to Sergeant of the Metropolitan Police Dept., June 5, 1860, and was Captain of the Department from 1865 to 1870. To aid in suppressing the Southern rebellion, at the time of the Civil War, he temporarily left the Police Service, and raised a company for the 131st Regt., N. Y. Vols., being commissioned as Capt., Nov. 21, 1862, and as Major of same Regt., May 11, 1865. While in Louisiana he served as Provost Marshal and Judge, also as Provost Sheriff, Dept. of the Gulf, in 1863-64, and was Military Street Commissioner of Savannah, Ga., from Jan., 1865, to the end of the war. His labors there were so efficient that they were commended by Gen. William T. Sherman, in his published report of May 9, 1865. He was slightly wounded, Oct. 19, 1864, while leading his company through the battle of Cedar Creek, Va., in which engagement eleven of the company were killed or wounded, being one-third of those present for duty.

At the urgent request of his friends, Major Stearns has published an interesting book, entitled "Reminiscences of the Late War," which gives an entertaining account of the years spent in his country's service. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and Supt. of the Chemical Works of Church & Dwight, manufacturers of Bi-Carbonate of Soda, with factories at Syracuse, N. Y. With characteristic Stearns ingenuity he has also patented a number of labor-saving improvements in machinery.

In the summer of 1899, Major Stearns made a gift to the town of New Ipswich, N. H., which is explained by the following resolutions of acceptance:

"Resolved, That the town of New Ipswich, N. H., expresses its admiration for, and high appreciation of the philanthropic interest shown by Maj. Albert Stearns in giving $3,000 to this town for so worthy an object as a lecture fund, and for entertaining so kind a remembrance of the town of his adoption.

"Resolved, That the town accepts the conditions of the gift, and authorizes the selectmen to receipt for and safely invest the same in an approved semi-annual paying investment, and, that the income therefrom be paid semi-annually to the lecture commissioner, to be devoted to the object designated by the giver."

Major Stearns' five children were born in Brooklyn, N. Y. He has assisted in the compilation of this work by his untiring interest, valuable suggestions and generous contributions.
